Our current monetary problems go back a long way. In 1913 President Woodrow Wilson signed the Federal Reserve Act into law. Ever since that time we have been forced to accept Fed debt notes as payment for all monetary transactions. The Fed is a privately held central bank. The only way for our economy to receive more notes, or dollars, is through a loan. Imagine how profitable it must be to create money at the cost of printing, then lend it out at the current interest rates.

Many of my clients ask me, "Why don't we pay the debt back?" While that solution sounds easy, the fact is no matter how hard we try to balance the budget, we will never be able to pay down all the debt. Every time a dollar is paid back to the Fed there is one less dollar in circulation for our economy. Take too many dollars out of circulation, and our economy goes into a recession or even a depression. Therefore we are stuck on this merry-go-round of revolving debt. In the current system, there's simply no way out.

So what causes inflation? Inflation is a direct result of excessive indebtedness. Up through 1971 there was a system to keep this whole process in check called the gold standard. In this system a set amount of Fed notes could always be exchanged for gold upon the owner's demand. In 1933 Franklin D. Roosevelt allowed the banks to partially default on this agreement, forcing U.S. citizens (under criminal penalties) to turn over their gold to this private bank-cartel in exchange for approximately 22 of their paper notes. The following year he devalued these notes by 40%, declaring gold at 36 notes. The next devaluation came after WW2, setting an exchange for foreigners at 42.22 notes. With the supply of Fed notes (money supply) expanding due to growing debt, President Nixon was faced with sharply rising gold prices. The choice became clear: either stop the debt expansion (which would put our economy into a recession), or default even further on the Fed's contract to exchange notes for gold. In order to stop the exportation of U.S. gold (August 1971), Richard Nixon closed the gold window, no longer allowing foreign interests to exchange dollars for gold, leaving the "Fed Dollar" subject to the unlimited growth of debt.

Protect yourself and your family's future: own gold!! It is not attached to any debt, (governmental or institutional). A piece of gold in hand can translate to wealth no matter where you are in this world. It is truly universal. Take delivery and do not concern yourself over price fluctuations. Divest out of paper assets and into gold with a minimum 10 - 25% of your liquid assets. What kind of gold should you own? The most private, liquid form possible. President Roosevelt has already proven that certain gold can become illegal over a weekend. Don't take chances! The Fifth Amendment of the Constitution, particularly the Eminent Domain clause, stands in the government's way of seizing collector coins. Buy coins with a recognized value to collectors. If you are uncertain as to what they are, CALL US at 1-800-686-2237 and consult one of our experts. FREE SILVER COIN TO FREE AMERICAN READERS

Just after the turn of the century, President Theodore Roosevelt took a great interest in coin design. Unsatisfied with Charles Barber's design of the Dime, Quarter, and Half Dollar, he commissioned some of the greatest sculptors of the time to redesign U.S. coinage. Over the next ten years, the most beautiful U.S. coins ever to be struck were born! Among these relics is the Walking Liberty half dollar. Designed by Adolph Weinman, the obverse features Lady Liberty with right arm extended, clutching an oak branch with the left, wearing the United States flag flying in the wind as she walks into the sunrise of a new day. The reverse features a proud eagle perched with wings spread. By far this is the most beautiful silver coin of the era.

Midas Resources has had the good fortune of accumulating a full bag of 2000 Walking Liberty Halves. We will send one of these historical artifacts free of charge to the first 2000 requests. Requests can be called in at 1-800-686-2237 or can be filled out and returned by mail. This offer is limited to one coin per household and requests must contain your daytime phone number.

OUR EDITORIAL VIEWPOINT for 1997

The Free American is committed to providing insight into current events. We are against the looting of America by foreign interests and foreign entanglements. Our commitment extends to ALL Americans regardless of race or religion. We refuse to alter history or our reporting of current events to cover for the corrupt, be they Christian, Jew, Muslim, White, Black, Oriental or Hispanic. A criminal is a criminal, a traitor a traitor regardless of his background, race or religion.

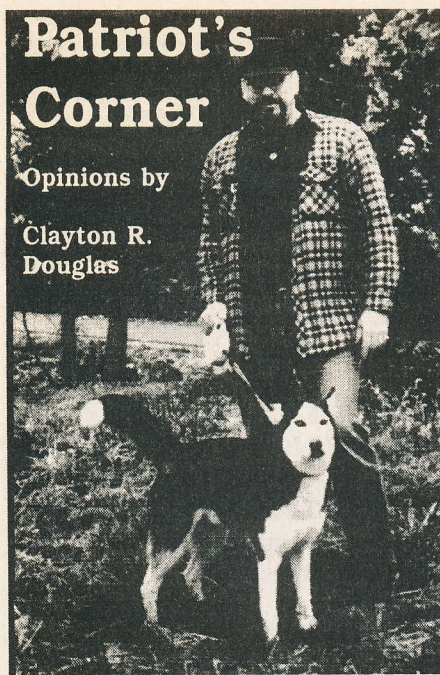

The truth is sometimes difficult to ascertain. Many of our authors have views about history that may conflict with yours. By listening to their arguments, rather than censoring them, you may expand your knowledge of current events and overcome the barrage of propaganda coming from our government.

We intend to expose crime and corruption, Communism and Fractional Banking Scams, so it is necessary to keep a close eye and an open mind when considering current events. Because we print a variety of opinions, this should, in no way, be considered racist or an attempt to label all for the actions of the elite few.

Charges by the media that patriots are anti-government is a blatant lie. We are against "Corrupt" government officials, traitors and government sponsored terrorism.

We will support with our lives, fortunes and our sacred honor the Constitutional Republic to which we swore allegiance, . . . against all enemies, domestic and foreign, so help us God.

On Jiang Zemin's Visit

On October 27, the stock market dropped 541.26 points. Bill Gates of Microsoft lost 1.75 BILLION dollars in a single day. As I write this, the market is supposedly rallying. This is primarily due to the large corporations, like IBM and AT&T, and investment funds buying back their own stocks to bolster confidence in the market. It may be that the crash we all expect, has been held off for a few more months, or even years, but I find the sudden drop extremely suspicious in lieu of the source of this mini-panic.

The talking heads on TV are all abuzz about this "market correction". The origin of this "domino effect" was a crash of the Hong Kong stock market. This news coincided with the arrival in the U.S. of Jiang Zemin, the "President" of the Republic of China.

Was this mini-crash created in much the same manner that the stock market crash of 1929 was engineered? It was reported that J.P. Morgan brought Winston Churchill to the floor of the stock market to witness the crash as a demonstration of the banker's power. Was this drop in the market the result of China flexing its economic muscle?

The free world (if there really is such an animal) watched silently as China assumed control of Hong Kong. Was the market crash there a result of that takeover or did China use its control to influence the market? Since China's Communist government controls most of the industry within its borders, and heavily influenced our own elections with its wealth, this scenario cannot be ruled out.

It appears that Clinton is enamored of Jiang if not indebted to him.

President Clinton has warned Americans (the dissenting citizens) not to interfere with Jiang's visit. Demonstrations are being allowed but out of sight of Jiang. Clinton doesn't want the American people, still angry over Tiananmen Square, to publicly disagree with the architects of the revolution which killed and imprisoned millions of innocent Chinese people.

China is currently making a bundle on the American people (Check out the tags on all of the merchandise in Walmart and the trade deficit between US and China) while rapidly acquiring our technology, (Ask Boeing how their plant in China is coming along) by stealth (Ask the salespeople in the booths at the electronic trade shows how closely they have to watch their Chinese shoppers.) or by blatant influence buying. (See Senator Thompson's hearing transcripts if you require further proof!)

Likewise, the international corporations view China as the next great market. (After all, YOU already have a car, a toaster, a TV and a microwave.) To them, it is both a source of cheap labor and an unlimited new market. (Check the latest population figures for China, compare to the US.)

The question then arises, "Are we leading China down the road to democracy and freedom for the millions of Chinese people or are we being gently herded into the Chinese/Russian version of a 'new world order'?"

Jiang was quoted as saying prior to his trip, "I hope the American people will understand that the U.S. democracy and freedom are not absolute concepts, and they must be brought into consistency with the economic development, history, cultural traditions and education of the people."

Freedom is not an absolute concept? Why must we be brought into consistency? Which people? Whose traditions? Whose History?

Following in the footsteps of his associates, like Wang Jun, Jiang is having tea with Clinton today. How many of you reading this are confident that your president is standing up to Jiang, telling him how OUR history and cultural traditions are far superior to the more recent standards imposed on the people of China by his revolution? Do you think Clinton is hammering Jiang to release the political prisoners rotting in Chinese jails? Grant more freedoms? Hold honest elections? Quit backing North Korea's nuclear bomb projects? Give up on re-acquiring Taiwan?

I don't think so!

A more likely scenario:

Jiang: "Is it OK to talk in here?"

Clinton: "You think I'm an idiot like Nixon? No way. I have the KGB come in and sweep the place twice a day. Haven't had any problems since I got rid of that damn Aldrich. He was always hassling my guys about shit like security clearances."

Jiang: "My congratulations on your election."

Clinton: "Couldn't have done it without your help. Americans are so tight these days."

Jiang: "We are pleased with your progress. The implementation of the internal security is going right on schedule. The demonization and demoralization of the nationalists is going well. We are also impressed with the balance of trade and the realignment of industry to our sector. I am a little disappointed with the failure to institute the ID card systems and the removal of weapons from your people."

Clinton: "Hey, I've done more than the last three presidents, haven't I?" I got the terrorist bill pushed through! I've managed to get enough new federal crimes on the books that it won't be long before no American will be able to own a gun. They won't be able to spit without getting a felony on their record. Hell, I've already got more of 'em in our work camps than you do!"

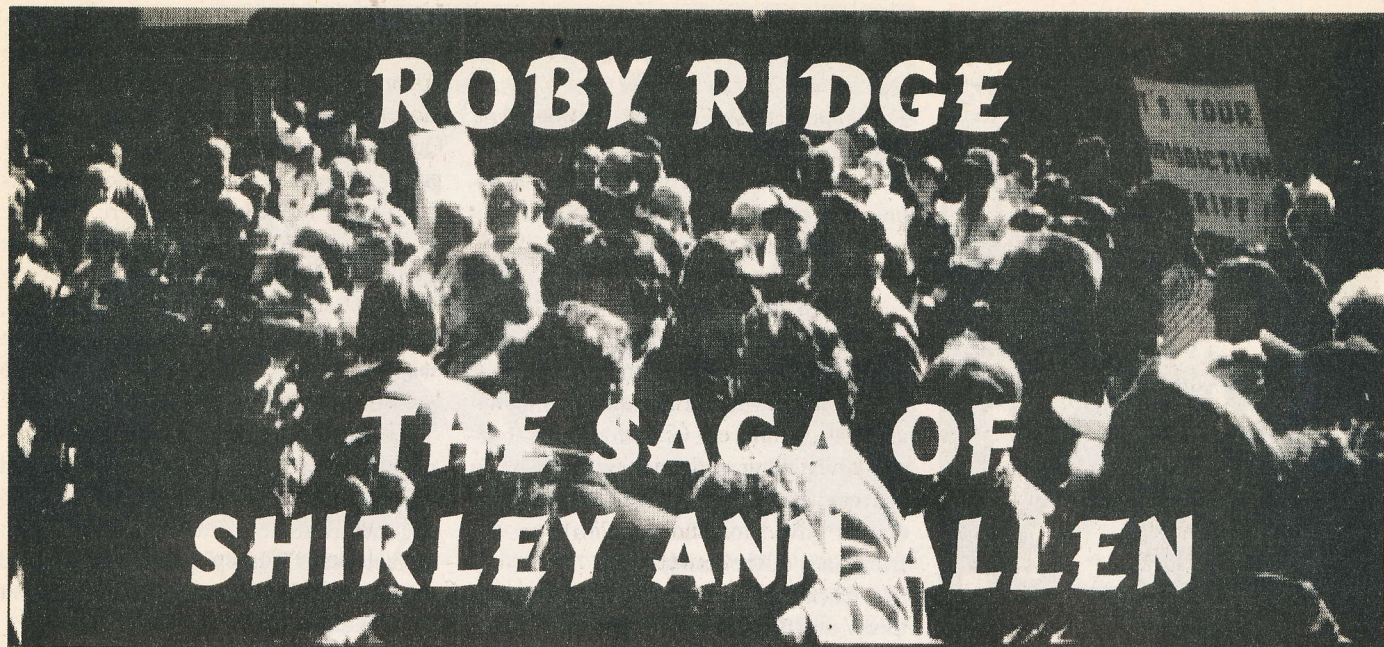

Jiang: "Speaking of the Terrorist Bill, initially, I thought the bombing was a master stroke, but there is still entirely too much personal freedom here. The story is unraveling. The state of Oklahoma is investigating your investigators. Magazines like this "Free American" are appearing on the newsstands beside Time and Newsweek."

Clinton: "I'm aware of the problem. He sends me one every month. But I've got this guy listed as "armed and dangerous". The FBI's Domestic Terrorist Task Force is almost together. I could send them in but, hell, the guy doesn't print that many and, he lives way out in the desert. . ."

Jiang: "Why are you making excuses?"

Clinton: "Hell, I like the way he writes! OK?"

ROBY RIDGE

THE SAGA OF SHIRLEY ANN ALLEN

by Clayton R. Douglas

A Synopsis of the Situation

While the siege of Shirley Allen swirled in and out of the headlines, much of America was in the dark about what is really going on behind the police lines in the tiny town of Roby, Illinois.

The police tell us they are using remarkable restraint against a mentally ill woman. They have told the press they are not out to harm the woman, but merely want to get her to a hospital for a psychiatric examination. They virtually held her prisoner in her own home for over six weeks, broken every window in her house, cut off her heat, electricity, water and telephone, tear gassed her, shot her with bean bag bullets, pepper gassed her, played Barry Manilow music throughout the nights, used bullhorns and amplifiers to interrupt her sleep every fifteen minutes and finally sent a police dog in to attack her.

Yet Shirley Allen has NEVER been charged with a crime, has no warrant for her arrest, has never appeared before a judge and never had a chance to face her accusers.

The sporadic coverage of the major media has led to a major effort by the patriot community and the local residents of Springfield and Taylorville, Illinois. Two major rallies have been held for her. The first, organized by former Ohio activist, J.J. Johnson, featured Jack McLamb, a former Phoenix police officer turned Constitutional crusader.

The rally was derailed by the police, whose reassurances to Jack about Shirley's sanity and their own honorable intentions, led Jack McLamb to make remarks to the crowd that nearly destroyed his credibility and got him heckled and harassed until he left the stage. The crowd had gathered in support of Shirley Allen and had no patience with Jack's support of the police. "We've heard their side of it," called out one heckler.

The organizer of the rally, J.J. Johnson followed Jack's lead and, instead of leading the angry people to the Roby roadblocks as everyone, including the police, expected, he led the press to yet another press conference at the capital building, effectively ending the protest. The third speaker, myself, urged the people to keep the pressure on the police, even to the point of civil disobedience, until Shirley was supplied with food and water. Oddly, my remarks were carried only by WMAY. No patriot news source mentioned a third speaker and the main stream media naturally focused on McLamb's remarks. The headlines in the local paper were, "McLamb; Police OK".

The second rally featured John Trochmann and neighbors of Shirley and was considerably more successful. The public outcry from this second rally combined with the threat of a lawsuit from a righteous retaliation by an outraged Jack McLamb, succeeded in persuading State Police to carry food and water to Shirley in the fifth week of the siege.

Ramifications

The ramifications of this goes far beyond the plight of poor Shirley Allen. This siege has raised serious questions about constitutional rights and has caused the average man or woman on the street to question whether or not we are living in a police state here in the U.S. of A.

Because the police forced the press back as far as a half mile from the Allen farm, well out of sight of the green farmhouse, it has made journalists and veteran news reporters question whether or not we have any real freedom of the press.

It may have contributed more to the demise of the militia in this country than any of the actions taken to date by the government itself. The question is being asked among populous and patriot groups, "If the militia won't defend a woman like Shirley Allen, who will they defend?"

There has been no defiance of the police, except by one local woman by the name of Shirley Boulche, who found a way around the police barricade and tried to deliver food, water, an American flag and a bible to Allen. She was tackled by police before she could make it to Shirley's front door and arrested for her trouble.

Why the state of Illinois is doing this, is the question of the day. The siege is costing the state over $20,000 dollars a day with no end in sight. Who is really crazy here?

The heart of the story is the spunk, courage, resourcefulness and determination of a 51 year old widow who dared to defend herself and her home against intruders hiding behind their badges and the court order of a judge who never met Shirley Allen.

It is this defense of her life and property, with the help of a Marlin Shotgun, that has fueled the siege by Illinois police. In the New World Order, this is considered armed resistance to authority and must not be allowed to succeed or else it might serve as example to the rest of the country. No one can be allowed to resist by force of arms!

The incident was precipitated by Shirley Allen's brother, Bryan Dugger.

The State Journal Register, a local paper described the incident this way the next day.

A Christian County woman described as paranoid and irrational held authorities at bay with a shotgun for a second day Tuesday, with no sign of giving up.

"It's just like a Mexican standoff," said Sheriff Dick Mahan Tuesday afternoon, as a state police tactical team watched her home and sheriff's deputies blocked nearby roads.

As of 10 p.m. Tuesday, the standoff continued with police vowing to wait for a peaceful end. Authorities did not identify the woman, who is 51 and lives alone.

The saga began about 2 p.m. Monday, when three deputies and the woman's brother tried to serve her commitment papers. They had planned to take her to St. John's Hospital in Springfield for a psychological examination because she had grown increasingly unstable.

Instead, the woman brandished a 12-gauge shotgun.

"She leveled a shotgun at one of the deputies and told him she was going to blow his head off," said state police Capt. Dan Kent.

The deputies and the brother dropped back. More deputies arrived. And soon they were trying to call her - to no avail. Five hours into the standoff, Mahan called in state police.

"We knew we didn't have the manpower to sit on this forever," he said.

Sounds so . . . proper, doesn't it?

State Police Intensify Assault

Later examination by more conscientious reporters paints a much darker picture of what went on during that first assault. In an interview, with a State Journal-Register reporter present, the man in charge of this siege, Police Captain Terry Gainer gave more information from the front lines of the standoff:

Christian County sheriff's deputies threw and fired between five and seven canisters of tear gas into Allen's house in the first hours of the confrontation, Gainer said. Only a handful of those canisters - perhaps as few as two - released any gas. "It was old material that they were using," he said.

According to deputies' reports and their interviews with state troopers, the decision to use tear gas was made to try to flush Allen out, Gainer said - not as a split-second decision when Allen aimed her shotgun at a deputy near her window, as Sheriff Dick Mahan has characterized it. "I acknowledge to you that the tactics that were initially used on Mrs. Allen are not the ones I would use," Gainer said.

But when Gainer took over, the tactics he would use were even more draconian. By the third day, Gainer had set up tactical teams, complete with a mobile home command center, parked on Bob Patrick's property, just down the bend from the woman's.

The teams, with about a dozen members, were relieved about every eight to 10 hours. Negotiators are also being relieved frequently.

"They get tired. They run out of things to say," said state police Lt. Dennis Sloman, who was in charge of the scene Wednesday.

The police cut her gas and electricity, although it has had minimal effect because of the warm temperatures. He told reporters that they did not plan to try sleep-deprivation tactics such as blaring music into her home or flashing lights nearby all night long.

"When we have a mentally unstable person, we're not sure how effective it would be," Sloman told reporters. "Really, we're just trying to show her that we don't mean any harm."

This resolve didn't last long.

On the fifth day of the siege, state police director Terry Gainer held a press conference in Springfield where he made a public plea to the woman: "We're here to help." The 10:30 a.m. press conference was not carried live by any TV stations. Besides, Allen didn't even own a TV. She was busy exchanging words with state police hostage negotiators, police said.

Shortly after the press conference began 15 miles away in Springfield, Allen walked out her back door to yell at two negotiators stationed beside a shed about 20 feet away. While the press was focused on Gainer, the police were launching yet another sneak attack on Allen.

"She raised her shotgun up as if to shoot the negotiators," said state police Sgt. Flynn Hanners, using this as an excuse for what happened next, when the incident was obviously a carefully planned set up.

Two state police tactical team members sprung out from behind a nearby garage and shot Allen with beanbag bullets - thin square bags about 1 1/2 inches long with metal beans sewn inside them.

The troopers fired six bags at her from their shotguns, with three bags hitting her in the chest, police said. Normally, that's enough to knock somebody down so police can run up and arrest the person.

But Allen's bulky clothing apparently absorbed some of the shock, and she quickly fired her gun in the direction of the shooting troopers. Allen's slug went through one side of her garage and out the other, just missing the troopers as they ducked for cover.

Allen fled back into her home with her shotgun.

The military style operation expanded.

As Allen moved around her house, she apparently spent time making small repairs - such as covering the handful of windows broken in the first police assault with sheets of plastic. Not exactly the actions of a deranged crazy person.

The paper on this fifth day of the siege stated, "Though all sides of Allen's house are constantly watched by troopers, there's not always a human being doing the watching. "In some areas of the house, there is constant electronic surveillance on the house," Gainer said. The automobiles parked in Allen's garage were also disabled.

The 30 or so troopers camped in the woods near Allen's house, work in shifts of about 10, nixed the idea of sharing their space with reporters covering the Roby story. So reporters and TV crews were kept about half a mile from Allen's house beginning September 26, the day she allegedly fired her second shot at police.

The state police brought in negotiators who called out to Shirley over an amplifier ever 15 minutes. Loud Barry Manilow music was played throughout the nights. The police assured the news media that this was not psychological warfare, that they were playing music they thought she would like.

This was met with skepticism to say the least.

Police also moved the police lines back one half mile, thus preventing reporters from confirming these statements independently.

Having a reporter accompanying the on-duty tactical troopers was a definite no-go due to danger, both to the reporter and to Allen if she should spot intruders, Gainer said. But troopers also didn't want reporters in their camps while they're off-duty, he said.

No doubt.

The cost of the standoff to state police easily has reached $500,000 in salaries, drawn from the regular state police budget, Gainer said. "But I think she's worth every penny," he added.

The question is, to whom?

Family Ties?

According to her brother, Bryan Dugger, Shirley was born into a central Illinois family of 11 children, nine of whom survive today. The family is spread out across the country, one sibling lives near Quincy and another near St. Louis, but most live in the South.

Shirley Dugger was 28 and a registered nurse at Memorial Medical Center in 1974 when she met John J. Allen, then 53, the retired superintendent of the mosquito abatement district in Decatur. Allen, whose first wife died in 1972, was recovering from a heart attack. Shirley was one of his nurses.

The two married about 1975, family members said, and the couple built their house in Roby the same year. Shirley gave up her job at Memorial in 1976, according to hospital records.

Despite the age difference, Dugger said, he welcomed his new brother-in-law. "He was one of the nicest human beings I've ever met in my life," he said. "A very intelligent man."

His sister and her husband shared "a beautiful 14-year marriage," Dugger said, motorcycling around the country and tending their garden. John died in 1989 after a battle with pancreatic cancer.

From there, Shirley began a downhill slide into depression, Dugger said. He visited Shirley at her Roby home frequently while he lived in Edinburg.

"She has fought depression and been doctored for depression, and it's gotten steadily worse," he said. "It's been off and on for the last eight years."

Despite her depression, Dugger said, Shirley Allen never threatened suicide as police have tried to allude.

Dugger brought his mother to visit Allen over the Labor Day weekend, he said, but she refused to speak to them. Her house and grounds, normally neat as a pin, had fallen into disrepair, and the garden had become overgrown.

"Of course, that raised our concerns about her health and her condition," he said. "Members of the family was called in, and we went to the proper authorities."

The family petitioned Judge Slater to have Allen ordered into a psychiatric evaluation. The family had to testify before the judge in a closed hearing about Allen's alleged behavior. Slater agreed to issue the order.

What followed has been the stuff of headlines ever since.

While Dugger insists that he has no interest in Shirley's property or money, the 50-year-old daughter of John Allen by his previous marriage, Betsy Tonia, disagreed.

"They want power of attorney" of Allen's estate, Tonia said.

The lease on the oil well has been held by Bi-Petro Inc. of Springfield since 1972. Bi-Petro owner and president John Homeier said the lease gives his company the drilling rights indefinitely, meaning Bi-Petro can extract the oil until it runs out.

The well produces 400 to 500 barrels a year, Homeier said, at a current oil price of about $18 a barrel. Last year, interest on the lease paid Allen about $1,000.

"It used to be a good well about 20 years ago," Homeier said. "It's just making enough money to justify the investment. That's all it does."

It's unclear exactly how much Allen's property is worth.

Her house and immediate lot is worth $54,420, according to the county assessor's office. The rest of her 47 acres - mostly woods down to the Sangamon River - is probably worth less than $2,000 an acre, according to several real estate professionals. At that price, Allen's property would be worth less than $146,000.

The key is the quality of the timber and whether the land could be subdivided into residential lots. Nobody would know that until they see it, the professionals said.

Also, at the time of her husband's death, Allen inherited two certificates of deposit then valued about $120,000. It's unknown whether she has cashed those in. Conflicting stories regarding Shirley's sanity emerged from her family and the relatives of her late husband.

Byron Dugger thought he was doing the right thing when he went with his family before a Christian County judge.

"Nobody anticipated this," Dugger said Tuesday, on the ninth day of a stand-off between his sister, Shirley Allen, and Illinois State Police in Roby. "It's about more than we can handle."

Paranoid and Irrational?

After the first week had passed the neighbors and local community had started to loose patience with the police and the patriot community had picked up on this latest siege. Various patriot groups and some news groups had picked up on the story and begun to question the motives and methods behind the "psychiatric evaluation" order issued by Christian County Judge Slater based on the statements of her brother from Arkansas and his "siblings". The outrage and suspicion towards the police and the county began to grow when reporters learned the records and transcripts of the hearing had been "impounded" by the state police.

The police showed Jack McLamb letters supposedly written by Shirley that proved their statements that she was paranoid. Much later into the siege, they released photocopies of two short notes to the press.

Do you think, based on these notes, that Shirley Allen is a danger to herself and to others?

These handwritten letters were sent by Shirley Allen to her mother last year. The first is postmarked May 13, 1996; the second is postmarked Sept. 30, 1996. The text is as follows:

*Dear Mom,
Have a good Mother's Day. Here's your May check with an extra 50 for Mother's Day. Was going to make you a jacket but haven't figured out what colors to put together yet. Today's not a good day. They zapped my head with radar and I have swelling & inflammation of the brain. Noise bothers my head. I mowed the yard yesterday using double ear muffers, but I get the constant vibration was too much. Everything is swelled up today. I'll see you when I recover.
Love, Shirley*

*Dear Mom,
How are you? Is the garden slacking off any? I made some green tomato mincemeat - enough for 7 qt & 2 pies. Not bad. The psychological & physical pain of the constant terror perpetuated by the county has* made me resort to my roots. I even make a pretty good pie crust without patches. I've gathered some walnuts that I'm going to crack. I planted some of them. I've made ketchup, salsa, tomato butter, tomato bread, tomato quiche. Just scrounging out a living. Like you taught me years ago. Comes in handy.

Take care.

Love, Shirley

According to a reporter for the Breeze, a Taylorville daily, the water well is contaminated. Shirley did go through periods of depression after his death and had been prescribed Prozac at one time in the recent past. Certain types of chemicals and pollutants can make you sensitive to light or sound. If she was suffering from delusions or paranoia, the actions of the police over the next month, the total isolation she was subjected to and the psychological warfare might have pushed the strongest person over the edge.

But Shirley Allen just got stronger.

Support Grows

Police Grow More Desperate

Although she had no water or electricity, Shirley seemed to have an inexhaustible supply of food and water stored within her home. While the police lurked out of her line of sight, waiting for her to come out and give herself up, Shirley cleaned, dusted and went about her daily tasks as though she could care less about the wishes of the police.

For a person accused of being mentally unbalanced, Shirley was doing a marvelous job of coping while keeping the police off balance.

Springfield Talk show host "One Eyed Jack" Jackson turned the heat up on the state police with daily commentaries on the siege. Talk shows across the country linked with his and a stream of patriot personalities, including this writer, appeared on his show to speak up on Shirley's behalf.

Despite the gaff by Jack McLamb of siding with the police, the Rally in front of Christian County Courthouse focused even more national attention on the stand-off in Christian County. Dozens of camera crews talked with dozens of the demonstrators as police ringed the courthouse and snipers hid on the surrounding rooftops. Signs supporting Shirley were shown to millions of Americans on prime time TV.

As the weather began to turn colder, neighbors began a nightly vigil in front of the police barricades to protest the inhumane treatment of Shirley Allen.

One neighbor, Lea Riley, characterized the police as inhuman thugs who got some sort of perverse pleasure in torturing the trapped woman.

The second rally, Sunday, October 26, featured John Trochmann and Joyce Riley.

While police were busy trying to flush Allen out, area residents mingled with out-of-towners to complain about the situation of Allen and others facing court-ordered psychiatric evaluations.

"We all have this problem. It's not just Christian County. It's not just Illinois. It's the nation," said John Trochmann, co-founder of the Militia of Montana.

Trochmann, considered one of the statesmen of the militia movement, urged the crowd at the Mount Auburn Community Center to lobby legislators to change Illinois law.

The statute allows a judge to order police to take someone for a psychiatric evaluation if the person meets two legal guidelines: is a danger to oneself or others, or is unable to care for one's basic needs. A police officer can also pick up someone for an evaluation under the same guidelines.

But the law requires a court hearing - with a defense lawyer present - to actually order that someone be committed against their will.

Critics, such as Trochmann, say there's not enough safeguards to guarantee someone's right to due process. And something needs to be done now to try to help Allen and others who may face forced psychiatric evaluations.

And they say that electroshock therapy - a debated form of psychiatric treatment - could further injure Allen.

"This is a priority. Your neighbor's life is at stake. And if not her, yours - sooner or later," Trochmann told the crowd to a chorus of cheers.

Another speaker with militia ties, Tom Wayne, suggested filing a brief in federal court asking U.S. District Judge Richard Mills to issue a temporary restraining order against state police. Many pledged to sign onto such a brief.

But while attention was focused on nearby Mount Auburn, police made one more attempt to force Shirley Allen out of her home.

This one had all the makings of a major assault.

Police drove an all-terrain vehicle around the woman's backyard several times to attract her attention and sent nine canisters of pepper spray into her home. They also broke several windows and a sliding glass door and sent a German Shepherd named J.D. through the broken door to find Allen.

Once more the police underestimated the will and resolve of Shirley Allen.

The pepper spray had no effect and Shirley shot the dog through its nose.

The dog retreated and was taken to a veterinarian where it was determined that the dog would live but probably would not return to police work. The police also retreated and, after the participants of the rally in Mt. Vernon adjourned to a Lea Riley's house behind the police lines at her invitation, were treated to chants of, "Bad Policeman. . . no donuts. Bad Policeman. . . no donuts."

After the rally, Jim Edgar, governor of Illinois, was served with a petition for redress of grievances drawn up by an attorney for one of Jack McLamb's organizations, the ACLA, American Citizens and Lawmen Association.

That petition was served on Edgar, Gainer, Judge Slater, Teresa Brown and Jim Ryan, Illinois State Attorneys and Richard Mahan, Christian County Sheriff. It demanded that the police back off and life sustaining provisions be granted her immediately, including food, water, utilities and protection against the elements. (After the last assault, all the windows in her home, including the sliding glass door, had been broken out.)

The state police, responded to the public and legal pressure, acceded to these demands. For weeks they had told the people that it was too dangerous to approach the house. Suddenly, they found an officer with the courage to reattach the wires they had cut earlier, turn on the power and place a box of food and water along with a note to Shirley;

The frightening aspect of this case, is that, under laws very similar to those used in Soviet Russia to imprison dissenters, any or all of us could, for a moment of depression, be classified as mentally ill under these type of laws.

In Illinois alone, over 750 people have been picked up for psychiatric evaluation. Of those, only Shirley Allen exercised her rights, property and personal, by defending herself against aggressors operating under the "color of law".

Police have come to think of themselves, not as public servants, but as our ultimate authority, against which there is no defense, no extenuating circumstances and little compassion will be shown those who defy them.

Finally, at 12:30PM on Thursday, October 30, the 37th day of Shirley Allen's ordeal, she was seized by police when she stepped outside of her house to throw the food the police had left into the yard. She was shot with a rubber bullet, wrestled down by police and taken to St. John's Hospital in Springfield.

The siege is over but still to come are the legal actions against the state on Shirley Allen's behalf.

Maybe you should check on the mental health laws in your state.

Meanwhile, be careful what you say to your relatives.

The only injury in this standoff was to J.D. (Just Dog) the police dog. As of this writing, J.D. is expected to recover fully.

AND NOT A SHOT IS FIRED

Introduction from

THE AMERICAN EDITION OF JAN KOZAK'S GUIDEBOOK: "HOW PARLIAMENT CAN PLAY A REVOLUTIONARY PART IN THE TRANSITION TO SOCIALISM, AND THE ROLE OF THE POPULAR MASSES."

Here is the technique by which a democratic, representative government is metamorphosed into a socialist state by legal, democratic means. The steps are gradual, unsensational, and obscure.

The apparently dull text reveals a fascinating story in peaceful revolution. It is a document of extreme importance.

The author, Jan Kozak, presents as illustration the authentic inside story of the takeover of Czechoslovakia, a story never before told outside the communist imperial orbit. And here it is illustration, nothing more.

The technique is all-important. Its operation becomes ever more recognizable as one reads; in the Middle East, in Latin America, in Africa, in Asia, and on the continent of Europe. With further reading, a realization grows that there are disturbing parallels to be seen in these United States.

How does the technique work? It may, for instance, be applied to some easily discoverable public concern. To answer the need a piece of "enabling legislation" is suggested, carrying no authority, expressed or implied.

It sets up an "agency". The agency, once established, follows normal agency behavior. The need becomes more precisely defined. A modicum of authority is requested. Pressures are organized, artificial and real, from "above" and from "below". The requested authority is voted, and pressures wane. In due course, further authority is suggested, and new coalitions of pressure appear. All in good time an Authority is there, self-contained: a new instrument of power has arisen, sufficient unto itself. This instrument may be local, regional or nationwide. Its key is the word Authority. In the beginning, this word is seldom employed.

By such parliamentary means a democratic and representative government can be made authoritarian, legally, and piece by piece. The form remains an empty shelf. Its philosophy and its content are gone. The person, the individual, who one year is free and independent, is next year just a little more restricted. Then a little more; and a little more. Suddenly, overnight, he no longer is a person. He is a cog, being moved inexorably by the monolithic machinery of the State.

And not a shot is fired.

NO HYMN SINGING ALLOWED 'ROUND HERE

Personally, I think everyone had better knock this "we are not allowed" language out of our heads. Do not give people the power to "allow" you or "not allow" you. Slave mentality has got to go.... and that young girl who continued to sing Amazing Grace is a good example of it not taking hold, so maybe there's hope yet.

No one wants to be arrested, but wouldn't it be great to be arrested for singing, say, a good old gospel hymn? I watched the film Matewan a while back, about coalminers in W. VA., and their attempt to get a union (back when unions were not simply another branch of management and/or corrupt government)—and in one scene, the miners are in their small church, singing "There is power, power, wonder-working power, in the blood (in the blood) of the Lamb (of the Lamb) ... and my, how the power of that song continues to echo thru my head

Maybe it is time we WANT to be arrested—all 260 million of us. Or even a tiny portion of that, say one or two million. Maybe, since we've all been made criminals anyway, that we all DEMAND to go to jail/prison/internment camp, RIGHT NOW.

My friend Juanita sends me this account of the sad status of our freedoms.

I have appended a question of a strategic nature after the article.

Tue, 30 Sep 1997 13:21:56 EDT

We just got home from Washington with the TeenPacters and guess what? The stories are true! In the United States of America, where everyone shouts FIRST AMENDMENT rights, we were not allowed to pray or sing. In the nation's capital, the most powerful city in the world, where policy is made, we could not talk to our God or sing.

There was a group of eleven on the steps of the Supreme Court praying. A police officer came up and told them they could not pray, that it was considered a form of protest. Later that night, we were all (a group of about 70) walking around the memorials. When we got to the Viet Nam Memorial, the kids started singing "Amazing Grace." It was beautiful, but very quickly a park policeman came running over and shouting at us to stop singing.

He went down the line shouting to all to stop singing. All did but one and the policeman shone his flashlight in her eyes, about six inches from her face shouting stop singing.

Well, the girl did when the song was over. She was determined to finish her song. You may can guess the identity of the girl. Her father and I are very proud.

We left the Viet Nam Memorial and walked to the Lincoln Memorial. On the steps of the Lincoln Memorial,, the kids started singing "The Star Spangled Banner." Guess what? The park police came running and shouting that we were not allowed to sing on the steps of the memorial.

I feel very sad for our country! Just thought you would like to know what happened. The rest of the trip was wonderful. We learned a lot and got to see and hear a lot. I wouldn't trade my experience for anything, but it was an eye opener.

Juanita

Dear M R,

What do you think the Park Police would have done, if the group had dispersed and hummed their tunes?

Look on the back of a dollar bill. See the words Novus Ordo Seclorum? Novus is New. Ordo means order. Seclorum translates to Secular or without religion. A New Order without God.

KAREN LEE BIXMAN FALLS ILL

Karen Lee Bixman, publisher of the "Investigative Report" went into the hospital almost two months ago for an operation on her back. Two days after the operation, she was walking with the help of walker, and went home to heal. Shortly, the pain returned and intensified. She went back into the hospital. When they opened her back up, they discovered an infection. She has been in the hospital ever since.

Karen has been a thorn in the side of the NWO for years. In her career, she has exposed the great gold theft by the Department of Interior and was the first reporter to expose the Border Area XXI debacle which would create a dual bureaucracy of both American AND Mexican government and non-governmental organizations (NGOs).

Karen recently went through a disastrous marriage that left her impoverished and ill. Was this man sent to woo and remove her? Was some foreign substance introduced into her immune system at home or in the hospital?

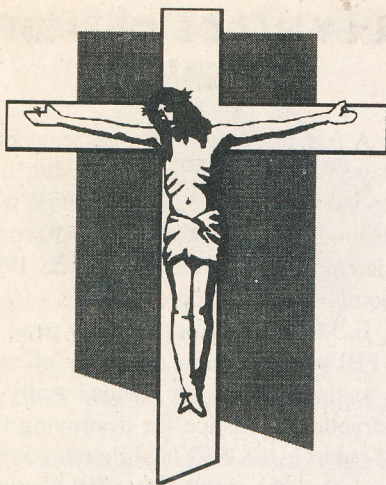

Her doctors can't seem to stem the infection. When I talked with Karen on the Fourth of November, she sounded weak and depressed. Her finances are gone, along with her health. She needs your help.

If you currently have a subscription to the Investigative Reporter, we will be happy to send you the Free American in its place until such time as Karen is able to resume publication.

If you can afford a donation, please send what you can to her. If you cannot, send cards and letters to:

ANTI-CHRISTIAN PORNOGRAPHY, VULGARITY MASQUERADES AS "ART"

CETINJE, Montenegro - Picture a Jesus Christ crucified on an (Orthodox) cross surrounded by four apostles, three of whom have the Nazi swastikas painted over their heads and halos.

Sacrilegious? Blasphemous?

Yes. But that's not all.

Now, substitute a pig's head for Christ's on the same cross, and visualize his oversized erect penis protruding toward the apostles.

Vulgar? Profane? Revolting?

You bet. But that's not all, either.

Imagine a nun praying on her knees to a naked woman with a halo over her head who appears to be masturbating. Envisage a cross with Christ's head on the cross shown as a lump of feces.

Disgusting? Crude? Primitive?

Of course. But that's not all, either.

The above were only some examples of the "art" which the liberal globalists, like Nikola Petrovic, a Paris-based distant relative of Montenegro's famous 19th century poet and bishop, brought to Cetinje (Montenegro) Bienale III. This spoof of Jesus Christ and of the sacred Christian objects, was sponsored by the United Nations' UNESCO organization, the European Council, the Montenegro government (read Milo Djukanovic, the prime minister and leading presidential candidate), the British and Austrian embassies to Yugoslavia, the foreign ministry of Italy, and by and some other French, Spanish and Austrian organizations.

"The Antichrist brought to you by the New World Order" (our term) exhibit was supposed to last from Sept. 20 to Nov. 2, 1997. It was hurriedly closed last week by the Montenegrin government after a barrage of protests from the Serbian Christian community, led by Metropolitan (Archbishop) Amfilohije of Cetinje. Djukanovic feared that his sponsorship of the exhibit may cost him some votes in the heat of the presidential election campaign, according to our Belgrade sources.

Despite the closure, there is no evidence that organizers or sponsors were embarrassed by the sacrilegious filth they were brazenly pawning off as "art."

"Isn't it cynical (for Mr. Petrovic, the president of the Bienale) to accuse (us) of 'censorship of an exhibit,' and, God forbid, of endangering 'artistic freedom,' when such 'freedom' spits upon the faith, upon the conscience, upon the human dignity of millions of people?" asked Met. Amfilohije in a news release dated Sept. 25. "An artist is free to proclaim that the feces and animal-like images are his basic reality of God - all in the name of 'freedom of expression.' Don't I then have also the right to protest when someone sticks such feces under my nose? Especially when the 'search for a new spirituality' is manifested by a painting of a feces or a pig on a cross... or that of the Jewish star instead of the Christ who has risen, thereby implying for those who are not illiterate that all European culture and art is founded upon a feces and pig-like passion."

(A highly placed Belgrade source has told this writer on Oct. 2 that some visitors to the exhibit reported a bad stink coming from the painting in which Christ's head was depicted as a lump of feces on the cross, suggesting that real feces was used to create the effect).

"The last phase of a dark epoch begins when politics becomes separated from morality," Met. Amfilohije said, quoting a passage from a catalogue at the Cetinje Bienale. "The darkness becomes deeper and wider when art becomes separated from morality, as was the case at this exhibit." —

Ed. An isolated case of anti-Christian propaganda? Hardly. In our TiM GW Bulletin 97/7-11 (7/29/97), we reported about an article published in the Israeli scientific magazine Galilo about the dangers of cloning, which was illustrated with an image depicting Virgin Mary with a cow's head, according to a July 5 report by the Birzeit News, a Birzeit University paper.

The Greek Orthodox Archmandate, Dr. Attallah Hanna, similarly attacked it as "the slur on Christianity. The 'Latin' (the Roman Catholic?) Patriarch Michel Sabbah commented that the Galilo image represented a kind of provocation, "that leads to war and sectarian strife."

The editor of the Israeli magazine apologized under pressure. Yet the New World Order sponsors of the Cetinje sacrilege remain unrepentant. Is it because they DID try to foment more "war and sectarian strife" in the Balkans with a DELIBERATE provocation of the Christians?

If so, their attempt has failed miserably. For, every artist's work is a mirror of himself, not that of the subject. Just like the communists who desecrated Christian art, the NWO artists and sponsors of the Cetinje exhibit have merely managed to demonstrate their own primitivism, crudeness and vulgarity.

For that reason, this writer wishes the exhibit had remained open, and that Christian organizations had given it maximum publicity, bringing visitors to Cetinje from all over the world to see firsthand the real face of the NWO. —

P.S. This writer has a copy of the poster advertising the exhibit, as well as the photos of several of the paintings described above. If any of you wish to have them uploaded, please let us know. But you will have to wait for this until this writer returns to the U.S., later in October, when the images will be scanned at our office. —

BACKYARD BIOSPHERES

Folks,
Loss of the American dream....a home of your own with the privacy to do what you want on your own property. The environmentalists are way out of control....

Laurel MacLeod

There is a story told of a stockbroker living in New York City who saved for years so that he could buy a small farm in the country for his wife, three children, and himself. When his dream was realized, he was so proud that someday he would be able to pass on HIS farm to his children and they in turn, to their children. What that man did NOT know was that his American dream would soon become a nightmare. The farm he had just bought was about to become a part of the "Champlain-Adirondack Biosphere Reserve."

Today, regulations "allow" this man to live on his farm, but under very severe restrictions. He can't rely on his farm as a means of financial income, because he's not allowed to grow crops or keep livestock. The children won't have the pleasure of owning a dog because a pet could be "dangerous to surrounding wildlife." The sad truth is that neither this man, or his children will ever fully own that land. Stories like this one are happening all across America. Welcome to the world of biosphere reserves.

A biosphere reserve is a large piece of land—a core area— set aside for conservation. It's usually public land, and human activity on that land is often severely, if not completely, restricted. But the real problem lies with the "buffer zones" created around the core area. These are often large pieces of public and private land where human activity is also restricted. So a home-owner might suddenly find himself governed by regulations that would prevent him from paving his driveway or building an addition on his house. And, of course, his property value plummets!

Incredibly, Congress plays no role in the selection, regulation or operation of biosphere reserves on American soil. Such regulations originate with UNESCO, the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization. UNESCO has a "subsidiary" organization overseeing biospheres in the United States called the "U.S. Man and the Biosphere Program," run by the State Department. We have no say in the way UNESCO is run, yet we're still embracing UNESCO regulations and giving them millions of dollars every year!

To further reinforce the biosphere reserve system, President Clinton is pushing for ratification of the Biodiversity Treaty, which he signed following the 1992 Earth Summit. Although the Senate has not ratified the treaty, the Clinton administration is already implementing portions of it through regulations imposed on private property.

Under the Biodiversity Treaty, up to 30% of American land would be "protected" by biosphere reserves. Section 8 mandates that the government "prevent the introduction of, [and] control or eradicate, those alien species which threaten ecosystems, habitats or species." Believe it or not, many radical environmentalists believe that people are the worst threat to American land.

Their answer for saving the environment is rooted in Marxist philosophy. They believe that humans can only be controlled, and the environment "saved," if private property rights disappear. The environmentalists are succeeding in implementing their agenda.

Americans must wake up to this assault on private property and national sovereignty. If we don't, we may soon find a biosphere reserve in our own backyard.

RUBY RIDGE OFFICER SENTENCED

A former FBI official was sentenced today to 18 months in prison after acknowledging the agency's reputation was tarnished by his destruction of a report criticizing the FBI's role in the deadly 1992 shootout at Ruby Ridge, Idaho.

E. Michael Kahoe, a former head of the FBI's violent crime and major offenders section, had earlier pleaded guilty to obstruction of justice for destroying the FBI report in the 1992 fatal shooting at the cabin of white separatist Randall Weaver.

Kahoe was sentenced by Judge Ricardo Urbina, who fined Kahoe $4,000 and ordered him placed on probation for two years after his release from federal prison.

Kahoe's lawyers said his 26 years of unblemished law enforcement experience should be taken into account. Federal prosecutors urged the maximum sentence.

Kahoe told the judge that his career was part of a "proud and noble tradition. I believe my actions have tarnished that tradition. I must live every day of my life with the realization of what I have done."

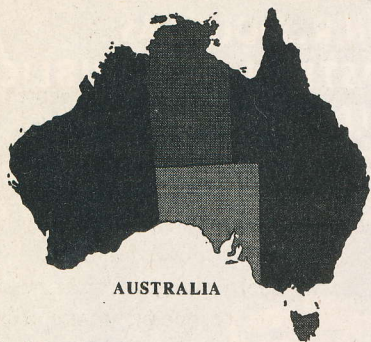

Prosecutors said Kahoe destroyed the documents and refused to send them to the U.S. attorney in Idaho to keep them from lawyers representing Weaver, whose wife and son were killed during a nine-day standoff with government agents at Weaver's rural cabin.

As head of the FBI's major crimes section, Kahoe was responsible for preparing a critique of the FBI's performance at Ruby Ridge. Federal prosecutors said he repeatedly refused to hand over documents and later destroyed the report which they were able to recreate from computer files.

AUSTRALIA UPDATE

"Carl F. Worden" wolfeyes@cidsnet.net

Perhaps now we know why Australia wants to disarm her citizen subjects. It seems the unemployment rate in that country is 33% — enough to cause some serious internal turmoil when the Australian socialist bubble bursts. The one thing politicians possess with excellence (besides a superb ability to lie) is foresight, particularly when it comes to their own survival. They have this thing about seeing Mussolini and his mistress hanging upside down, and they just don't like the idea. We all know the "Moose" got bagged by irate country folk who were enabled to do so only because they were quite well armed, and that salient fact has not been lost on our modern day tyrants. Hence, the Aussie country-club set saw a marvelous opportunity to disarm their brethren when one lone wacko offed a few innocents. Now you know the rest of the story...

Australia gun amnesty draws 600,000 Machine guns, Uzi pistols, anti-aircraft gun turned in CANBERRA, Australia - More than 600,000 machine guns, Uzi pistols and even an anti-aircraft gun have been turned in under an amnesty program to rid Australia of automatic weapons, the government said Tuesday. The plan, spurred by a 1996 massacre of 35 people, allowed owners of illegal guns to hand them over to police without fear of prosecution and be paid the market value of the weapons before they were outlawed.

THE GOVERNMENT HAS SPENT more than $217 million so far to buy back the guns, Federal Attorney-General Daryl Williams said. After midnight Tuesday, the amnesty will continue but owners will no longer be compensated. Australia's states agreed to reform their gun laws after Martin Bryant, armed with at least two automatic rifles, killed 35 people in April 1996 at Port Arthur, Tasmania. It was the worst mass murder by a lone killer in Australia's history. Bryant has been jailed for life.

The states standardized and strengthened gun registration and licensing laws. All automatic and semi-automatic firearms, including .22-caliber semi-automatic rifles and pump-action shotguns, were banned except in special circumstances.

Most gun owners opposed the tighter laws and some have threatened to bury or hide their guns. In the outback, farmers commonly use the .22-caliber automatics, pump-action or automatic shotguns to control pests such as rabbits and foxes.

Deputy Prime Minister Tim Fischer, leader of the rural-based National Party, praised owners who did hand in their guns. "I realize for many people it was parting with something that they regarded as near and dear, and to those who've done so, my commendation," he said.

Dissatisfaction with the program remains in some quarters. One government legislator from rural Queensland said Tuesday that the buyback had "put the welcome mat out" for murderers and housebreakers.

"Every single house in Australia is now unprotected," Bob Katter said. "That is the greatest invitation for an increase in crime."

Conservative government barely retains power

ADELAIDE, Australia - The South Australian state government's ruling party retained power after Saturday's state election with a razor-thin margin that sent a warning to conservative politicians across the country.

State Premier John Olsen's Liberal party, beset by divisions in its ranks, went into the election with a commanding 36-11 majority in the state legislature that it had won in 1993 after the State Bank collapsed under the previous Labor Party government.

But the conservatives were barely able to perk up the economy or alleviate the dismal unemployment rate, which is now about 33 percent among young people and has been as high as 40 percent, the worst in mainland Australia.

Election results Sunday morning showed the Liberal Party likely to hold 24 seats in the 47-member lower house of the state parliament. Labor had 18, the Democrats and Nationals one each, and three seats were undecided.

Deputy Premier Graham Ingerson said the public was "disenchanted" with both major parties.

I can't imagine why. — CW

60,000 pistol-packing federal bureaucrats show why people fear the government

WASHINGTON, DC — A new report revealing that almost 60,000 federal employees now carry weapons has prompted the Libertarian Party to come out in favor of gun control — for the federal government.

According to a study by the General Accounting Office (GAO), an astounding 60,000 government employees in 45 different agencies now carry guns as a routine part of their job.

And it's not just law enforcement agents: Poultry inspectors, park rangers, and disaster aid workers are all allowed to carry weapons — in addition to special agents from the Small Business Administration, NASA, the Department of Education, the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, and even the Department of Veterans Affairs, noted Steve Dasbach, national chairman of the Libertarian Party.

"Federal employees have gone nuts — gun nuts," he said. "It's time to impose a waiting period on the federal government, while the American people conduct a background check on these armed and potentially dangerous bureaucrats."

According to the GAO investigation, the number of federal employees with guns is growing rapidly — up by 20% in the last 10 years. In fact, 2,436 armed personnel were added to the federal government's payroll last year alone.

Even worse, federal employees are getting more powerful weapons. According to the GAO, the Energy Department now has access to machine guns, and other agencies can summon tanks and military helicopters. In addition, the Western Journalism Center discovered that the National Park Service and the Department of Health & Human Services now have their own SWAT teams.

Machines guns? Tanks? SWAT teams? What's going on?

Dasbach said he has a theory: "Congress has passed over 3,000 criminal laws, and federal agencies have churned out hundreds of thousands of regulations that carry criminal penalties. The result is that ordinary Americans run a constant risk of violating laws they've never even heard of as federal agents scramble to enforce those laws at the point of a gun."

The News Behind The News

Written and performed By Carl Klang

Have you ever stopped to wonder why the world's in such a mess?
Why there's so much mindless mayhem on the T.V. in the press?
Why so many busy businessmen are snappin' from the stress?
And the rest of us are joggin' from depression?

Did it ever once occur to you or ever cross your mind?
That the problems of this nation are created by design?
That no matter what they tell ya there's another bottom line?
Intertwined between the patterns of deception?
Since our eyes were first open and our ears began to hear
They've been herding us like cattle through our fantasy and fear
They rule us through illusion and confusion of the mind
And by changing subtle meanings to the words between the lines

It's the news behind the news and the methods you can use
It's the blueprint and the plan you can rely on
And it's written in the Protocols Of The Learned Elders Of Zion
Move along now all you little bovine...

Now they'll tell ya it's a forgery they'll say that it's a fake
That some anti-Semite wrote it for the money that he'd make
It's been slanderized and demonized and labeled "racist hate"
By the same who stake a claim to it's creation
Now I'm not here to try to argue if it's fake or if it's true
If the author was a commie or the likes of you know who
What I'm really tryin' to tell ya and to get across to you
That it's the blueprint to the downfall of our nation

There's a cause to the chaos that's occurring in the land
There's a road to communism there's a global master plan
You'll never read about it in a book of history
'Cause it's been hidden from the masses to control their destiny

It's the news behind the news and the methods that they use
It's the blueprint and the plan they all rely on
And it's written in the Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion
Yee haw!

Now them Protocols of Zion have a crazy history
Henry Ford gave out a copy free, with every Model "T"
It's a crime to even own one if you live in Germany
Though it's not an anti-Jewish publication

So if you ever get a chance to get a copy of your own
Just remember not to ever leave it lyin' 'round your home
'Cause ya never know just where their snooply news reporters roam
One might even be a friend or close relation
It's the cause to the chaos that's occurring in the land
It's the source of communism, it's the global master plan
You'll never read about it in a book of history
'Cause it's been hidden from the masses to control our destiny

It's the news behind the news and the methods that they use
It's the blueprint and the plan they all rely on
And it's written in the Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion

NWO BANKING

THE BANK SECRECY ACT - ANOTHER GOVERNMENT ASSAULT

by Ira Madsen

(<http://www.dialnet.net/users/imadsen/banks.sht>)

It's an interesting trap—and one that's very dangerous. The banks have to report the transaction, but they don't have to tell you that you do also. You have to report it—or you're a criminal. And, the teller can make a bundle for turning you in!

Early in 1997, the latest in a string of government regulations that target ordinary citizens took effect. Because of this, you could be liable for serious trouble without any idea you had done anything. Imagine this scenario...

You need to send your brother money for a family emergency. You walk into your bank and purchase a $3500 money order, with money from your savings account. The teller handles your transaction and says nothing. You drop it in the mail and quickly forget about it. A few days later, you're arrested; and every penny in your savings account—your major life savings—is seized. You're convicted of a felony—failure to file a “currency transaction report” (CTR), IRS Form 4789. The bank could have done it for you, but under the law it's your responsibility—and the teller stands to make a fortune if you don't report it.

The teller can collect a reward—up to $150,000!!!!

Make no mistake, this scenario is not only possible—situations like it are already happening. How can this be?

You may not know this, but under the provisions of the Bank Secrecy Act, a CTR must be filed with the IRS for any cash transaction involving $10,000 or more. But that's not all. CTRs must also be filed by anyone purchasing more than $3000 in money orders or making transfers among bank accounts in a series totaling $10,000 or more.

You can become a felon merely by making a banking mistake!

Failure to file a CTR is a criminal felony. And to constitute a crime, there is no requirement that the money be involved in any criminal activity. It is a crime simply not to report the transaction. Your bank could file it for you—but they may not. Besides, the law also applies to private bankers, brokers, investment bankers, currency dealers, check cashing firms, credit card and insurance companies, metals dealers and jewelers, pawnbrokers, loan companies, travel agencies, money senders (Western Union), auto, boat, airplane and sales companies, parties to real estate transactions, casinos, and others.

The penalty? If you were to make such a mistake, you would be liable to a five-year prison sentence and a $250,000 fine.

The law allows the FEDS to confiscate any funds they alleged to be involved, and your bank teller would collect a huge reward!

The laws have made banks liable for not conforming to regulations requiring them to report these transactions. They must file “suspicious activity reports” on a wide range of activities that may be perfectly innocent transactions. Fed investigators are already conducting “sting” operations at selected banks to insure employee compliance.

Banking with Big Brother

Lots of people don't know this, but in 1996, using the powers of the Bank Secrecy Act, the government put into law new “Suspicious Activity Report” (SAR) regulations. These rules—which affect 23,000 banks and lending institutions—force bank officers and employees to act as “cops.”

Under the rules, they now have a legal duty to report any individual or cumulative transactions of $5,000 or more which in their judgement might be suspect.

And besides being liable for penalties if they don't report these transactions, they have the financial incentives to do so, as mentioned before. It doesn't matter whether you're wealthy or of average income, an individual or corporation—the government is targeting the wealth of it's citizens, and you are at risk.

Today, your wealth—and your ability to do with it as you please—are in great danger. Not only are there a proliferation of thieves in our society out to steal our money, but the government itself—the very institution we rely on to guard our rights—is after our wealth more persistently and maliciously than any thief in the world.

BATF RULES HOME SCHOOLS GUN FREE ZONES

BATF Director John Magaw in a letter to Congressman Dan Coates has formally asserted the position that home schools operated under state law are “schools” as defined by the amended Gun-Free School Zones Act and that therefore possession of any firearm within 1000 ft of such schools is a felony (yes, including those of the home schooler). For those of you who thought United States v. Lopez put a spear through the heart of the act:

Following the Supreme's opinion in Lopez Congressrat Schumer and his pack promptly enacted after-the-fact “legislative findings” about the terrible effects on interstate commerce of guns in school zones and re-enacted the prohibition against guns in school zones (which 43 states have always prohibited anyway).

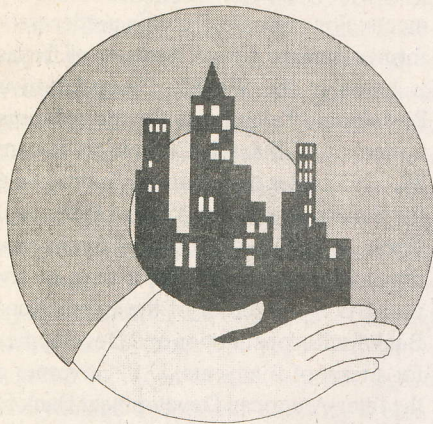

The Home School Legal Defense Ass'n (about which I know nothing) has begun a declaratory judgment action in the Western District of Texas to declare the act unconstitutional. I have recommended to NRA and GOA counsel that we promptly commence counterpart actions everywhere home schools meet the BATF's interpretation. NC is such a state. They are both enthusiastic.

I am looking for home schoolers who would be willing to be plaintiffs in each of NC's three federal judicial districts (and also for whatever financial backing is available to support the suits). The suits will not be dependent upon receiving any financial support, however.

The idea here is to get as many suits going in as many districts as possible so that we ensure a split among federal circuits and subsequent Supreme Court review, rather than being piecemealed to death as we were in the Section 922(o) (machinegun) cases. These cases are also a beautiful vehicle in which to present the Second Amendment issue (intertwined with the First Amendment — most home schoolers do so for religious or religion related reasons) on behalf of attractive plaintiffs in a neutral setting (i.e., the “gun” issue is not being raised by a bank robber). This is the litigation opportunity of a generation for members of the gun culture.

CAN YOU PROVE IT?

My name is Greg Eaton, I am 18, and ever since last year in June, I believed that our government and the U.N was in this N.W.O thing and that they where going to do all this stuff. Like take our guns away, declare martial law, throw out the Constitution, and much more. But I was foolish to believe that stuff. I can no longer believe that anything what so ever like that is going to happen, and never will be. Can you prove it? I don't see any proof.

Another thing. Why do you people bad mouth buisness people so much? You talk like C.E.O's are out to conquer the world! I am going to college to major in buisness administration and I want to work in Corporate offices for some company. and I would like to be a C.E.O! That is my goal. I have a life to live. My life doesn't revolve around spreading these lie's about our government and the U.N.

I ask myself. What did the government do to you people to make you so bitter towards them??

Greg Eaton,

Answer provided by John R. Prukop

I will attempt to answer some facets of your questions regarding your concerns. However, I will caution up front, that unless one has a grounding in the philosophy and thought of the Founders of this Nation, and understands the precepts of the Constitution for the United States of America, and those events that have resulted in the gradual implementation of socialism here in America, and the gradual progression of each plank of the Communist Manifesto, the questions you raise may be difficult to summarize here in this short space.

As I will barely scratch the surface herein as related to the underlying subversion of the Constitutionally authorized monetary system, which by the way must be corrected in the first instance and our Treasury's re-set with what the Constitution authorized, perhaps others can add to what I have written concerning other facets of the spider web of deceit that has been intricately interwoven around our body politic. What I present here is just a "snippet" of a long and involved process. We have available several thoroughly researched and documented monograms that are available for a modest fee, should you desire further information.

To understand the morass that we presently find ourselves in, it is necessary to look at what "We the People" authorized, pursuant to the Articles layed out in the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, and how those authorizations have been usurped and subverted. When it is all shaken down to the basics, you will find that a majority of those in the governmental structure only pay lip-service to the Constitution, even though as a requirement of their holding one of our Offices of Public Trust, Honor or Profit, they have sworn solemn allegiance to support it. So, let us begin with the Oath of Office, as that is the foundation.

Title 5 of the United States Code is entitled "Government Organization & Employees." In Section 3331, you will find the following: "Oath of office - An individual, except for the President, elected or appointed to an office of honor or profit in the civil service or uniformed services, shall take the following oath:

'I, _____, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic, that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter. So help me God.' This section does not affect other oaths required by law." [P.L. 89-554, Sec 1, 80 Stat. 424]

There are several other related sections to the one described above. They include Section 3332, "Officer affidavit" which basically states that no one has given, transferred, promised, or paid any consideration for or in the expectation or hope of receiving assistance in securing an appointment to office; Section 3333,

"Loyalty and striking against the Government" which states that his acceptance and holding of the office or employment DOES NOT or WILL NOT violate Section 7311 of Title 5. Here is where the rubber meets the road, if you will:

"Section 7311. Loyalty and striking - An individual MAY NOT ACCEPT or hold a position in the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia if he-

(1) advocates the overthrow of our constitutional form of government;

(2) is a member of an organization that he knows advocates the overthrow of our constitutional form of government . . . "

Without laboriously printing out here additional important pieces of the U.S. Code, we must list here 50 USC 781 which summarizes a Congressional finding of necessity regarding the control of subversive activities, and the existence of a "world Communist movement" as the result of evidence adduced before various committees of the Senate and House. In particular, you need to personally read Section 781, and sub-parts 6, 7, 9, 12, 13, 14 and 15, which will give you the meat. Next, read carefully the definitions in Section 782, and especially item 17 therein: "The giving, loaning, or promising of support or of money or any other thing of value for any purpose to any ORGANIZATION shall be conclusively presumed to constitute AFFILIATION therewith."

The bottom line here is that the United Nations ORGANIZATION, as well as its Charter, and various other AGREEMENTS and TREATIES are in opposition of and diametrically opposed to the Constitution for the United States of America. And one cannot serve TWO masters. It's either one, or the other. As you will discover, the United Nations represents and consists of various factions of the World Communist Movement. This organization is, in effect, advocating the overthrow of our Constitutional Republic and those who serve to implement its agenda, which includes the President, the Attorney General (who is also the permanent representative to INTERPOL) and a host of those in the Senate and House. The operations at Ruby Ridge and WACO were under control of the Attorney General, thus they were UN-INTERPOL operations. She is not compensated by the United States.

Can You Prove It cont. on page 18

You should know that discussions were begun in 1950 in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee as to the relinquishment of the sovereignty of the de jure United States of America and the several Republican States of the Union, to the United Nations and its organizations, and ratification of a "World Constitution" promoted by Rexford Tugwell, The World Federalist Association, etc. Numerous individuals were questioned during the Senate Hearings concerning the intents and purposes of the United Nations and its Organizations.

James P. Warburg testified on February 17, 1950 that, "We shall have world government, whether or not we like it. The question is only whether world government will be achieved by consent or conquest." These Hearings occurred on February 2, 3, 6, 8, 9, 13, 15, 17 and 20, 1950. The records were ordered SEALED for 75 years. That means you "might" get a look at them by the year 2025.

Since the Bretton Woods AGREEMENT of 1944, which is also known as the "Final Act of the United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference" — this occurred on July 22, 1944 at Bretton Woods, New Hampshire — and the subsequent Amendments thereto, the entire monetary system of the United States has been subverted and usurped by Agents of Foreign Principals, namely the International Monetary Fund and The World Bank, which are components created by Bretton Woods. The FORMER Presidential Cabinet Office of "Secretary of Treasury" does NOT exist, except in PRETENSE OF NAME ONLY. The Treasury of the United States of America was obliterated and eliminated in 1921 by the commingling that went on, prior to the economically engineered "crash" in 1929.

Following later was the Emergency Banking Relief Act of 1933, when the people went to the banks to get their money, i.e., their Gold, but it wasn't to be found. A panic broke out and the banks closed their doors, all under the manipulation of the board of Governors of the Federal Reserve, a PRIVATE banking corporation. The people's money had been EXPROPRIATED to FOREIGN accounts by the international bankers, and that is why the so-called "emergency" was declared. The banks could not meet the obligation to their depositors. At that point in history, people had real money in their pockets; a One Dollar Federal Reserve Note was REDEEMABLE for a real Dollar, silver. Since the emergency and subsequent acts, and from the inception of Public Law 90-269 on March 18, 1968, the Federal Reserve Notes you carry around in your pocket are NOT REDEEMABLE. On October 28, 1977 the passage of Public Law 95-147 declared all banking institutions, including State banks, to be under the direction and control of the corporate "Governor" of The Fund and The Bank. The Act further declared that section 10(a) of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934 is amended by STRIKING OUT the phrase 'stabilizing the exchange value of the dollar.' Further, the Act states that the Joint Resolution to assure uniform value to the coins and currencies of the United States SHALL NOT APPLY to obligations of the United States issued on or after the date of enactment of this section (10/28/77). Therefore, the International Organizations, Corporations and Associations, had refused to pay their debts, and determined that they could pass the loss of their non-redeemable, non-current notes, bonds and evidences of debt off on others, and thereby crown their fraud with success.

What does this tell you? Those exercising the Offices of the United States, and in equal measure, those exercising the Offices of the several States of the Union, knew that these de facto transitions were unlawful and unauthorized by the basic fundamental law, the Constitution, yet they sanctioned, implemented and enforced the complete debauchment of the coin and currency of the United States, and thus allowed the resulting governmental, social, industrial economic change throughout the United States of America. According to Federalist Papers No. 44, it appears "they" were and are now under the delusion that they can do both directly and indirectly what they were absolutely prohibited from doing.

The present "Department of the Treasury" is NOT the same thing as the "Treasury of the United States of America." Search as you may, you will not find an APPOINTMENT for Robert Rubin, the present so-called "Secretary of Treasury." But you will find his APPOINTMENT as the alien, corporate "Governor" of the International Monetary Fund (The Fund) and The International Bank For Reconstruction and Development (The World Bank), among other INTERNATIONAL appointments. Check out 22 USC 286, and the Weekly Compilation of Presidential Documents. For example, Rubin's predecessor, former Senator Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, is listed in the Weekly Compilation of Presidential Documents for the Administration of William J. Clinton on January 28, 1993 under Nominations Submitted to the Senate as follows: "Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, to be U.S. Governor of the International Monetary Fund for a term of five years; U.S. Governor of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development for a term of five years; U.S. Governor of the Inter-American Development Bank for a term of five years; U.S. Governor of the African Development Bank for a term of five years; U.S. Governor of the Asian Development Bank; U.S. Governor of the African Development Fund; and U.S. Governor of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development. Neither Rubin nor his predecessor, Bentsen, are paid by the United States of America. They are, for all intents and purposes, Agents of a Foreign Principal. See 22 USC 611, 612. They are DIRECTED, CONTROLLED, FINANCED AND SUBSIDIZED BY A FOREIGN POWER that has nothing to do with the "United States" or its Constitution. Question: How do you serve TWO masters? Answer: You cannot.

You and others need to know that there are a number of agreements and treaties which were and have been entered into without or absent of the "under Authority of the United States" clause, as required by the Supremacy Clause of the Constitution, Article 6, Clause 2. As a for instance, Article I, Section 8 mandates that Congress shall have the (exclusive) Power To coin Money, regulate the Value thereof, and of foreign Coin, and fix the Standard of Weights and Measure. This, as clearly seen from the foregoing, is not what is occurring. Thus, we have subversion and usurpation by a foreign power. In all of these things, the result was not immediately seen for what it was, that is, usurpation. The process employs gradualism, with implementation of various acts over an extended period of time. Go back and read President Andrew Jackson's Veto Message concerning the Charter for the Bank of the United States (July 10, 1832, and his Farewell Address of March 4, 1837. Once you read and study these two documents, you will understand now what is happening.

The story is long and sometimes confusing. The bottom line is that the legal documentation from the governments own records evidences the takeover of the United States by the International Banking Cartels. The United Nations and its Peacekeeping operations are going about globally, implementing a Communistic One World Government. The sovereignty of the United States was long ago dissolved. They are now setting about taking the guns so there can be no resistance. This Communistic One World Government is by foundation of the Emergency Banking Relief Act of March 9, 1933, 48 Stat. 1, and the seditious treaties created, signed and enacted as Federal Laws by a compromised, seditious, bankrupted and insolvent United States Congress and Senate. By Bankruptcy, the de facto United States Federal Government exists today by PRE-TENSE, in Name only, and is exclusively insolvent of sovereign authority because of the deprivation of a gold and silver monetary system.

In truth, the "United States" is known as an illegally contracted 19.96% voting share stockholder of the IMF, which is a branch of the United Nations that illegally promotes a Social Communistic One World Government.

The Department of the Army Field Manual, FM 41-10, "Civil Affairs Operation," and the Technical Research Manual, TM-SW7905.1, "Silent Weapons For Quiet Wars," outline the procedures for the takeover of the American people through the control of the economy in what is known as Social Engineering. This is a type of Biological Warfare that has been continuously implemented upon the American people since 1954 for the sole purpose of conditioning and maintaining voluntary consent. Consent of "what" you ask? Consent of usurped Liberties in order to implement the NWO.

Conveniently, through "government" inspired, IRS tax exempt 501(c)(3) organizations such as Handgun Control, Inc., and numerous others concerning every facet of American life, these benevolent groups and their philanthropists using funds of the IMF and the World Bank are placing a stranglehold on American liberty. Handgun Control is the organization behind the scenes of I-676 to inch-forward the eventual and complete disarmament of every Citizen, one step at a time, one state at a time, sold to the American people as a "gun safety act" to "protect the children." It is part and parcel of the larger doctrines and intents of Public Law 87-297 which allows the merger of the Soviet, Chinese and American military counterparts into a One World Army, under the UN Flag. This is documented in Department of State Publication 7277. The United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (22 USC 2561) was created by PL 87-297, as was the Base Closure Commission.

The "sheeple" are sleeping while their governmental structures are being dismantled and given to international organizations. Privatization and deregulation represent still more pieces of the puzzle.

I would be remiss if I didn't offer a solution, so here it is briefly: Legally, there are only two solutions in the written law as to curing America's problems. First, one needs to obtain a true and correct education of the Emergency Banking Act and then set about to have it REPEALED. In this way, America can (1) Reinstate the Constitution for the United States of America (1787); (2) Reinstate the silver and gold monetary system; (3) Regain State Citizenship for each and every American living outside of the 10 square miles of Washington, D.C.; (4) Remove the United Nations from the State of New York; (5) Remove all Unregistered Foreign Agents known as ALL Judges and Attorneys from fraudulently serving as "Judicial Officers" of the United States; (6) Reinstate the Common Jury in each City, Town and Rural area, thereby placing the Power of Government back into the hands of the People; (7) Remove 95% of our Foreign Congress that are on the payroll of the United Nations; and, most importantly, (8) Reinstate the Supreme Court of the United States and Article III Courts under the Constitution for the United States.

The stage is presently being set for a United Nations invasion. After foreign INTERPOL agents acting under PRE-TENSE of name as "FBI" and "BATF" murdered Vickie Weaver while she was holding her infant child in her arms, shot 13-year old Sammy Weaver in the back while he was trying to save his dog, and after these same FOREIGN INTERPOL agents murdered innocent men, women and children at Waco, Texas, all under the orders of JANET RENO who is directly paid by the UN-IMF, and after these identical FOREIGN INTERPOL agents, who had their offices at the Federal Building in Oklahoma City, conveniently failed to show up to work on the day of the bombing- after all the calculations have been accumulated, a study of History will clearly inform the prudent reader of the Reinstatement, or Civil War and then Reinstatement, that is about to befall our Nation.

Please order a copy of WACO: The Rules of Engagement, a 136 minute video documentary exposing that your government "LIED" to you about Waco. WAR was declared and the American people continue to sleep. The original declaration of War and all of the unconstitutional, criminal and immoral activities that have been launched against the American public are the result of a WRITTEN and Formal Declaration of War, which was instituted with the enactment of the Emergency Banking Relief Act of March 9, 1933, located at 48 Stat. 1. This Act amended the War Powers Act of October 6, 1917, therein changing the meaning of "enemies" of the United States from foreigners to that of United States citizens.

The Constitution of most of our states (and of the United States) assert that all power is inherent in the people; that they may exercise it by themselves; that it is their right and duty to be at all times armed and that they are entitled to freedom of person, freedom of religion, freedom of property, and freedom of press."

CHINA WATCH

OPEN LETTER TO MAYOR O'NEILL AND THE PORT AUTHORITY OF LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA

This letter is an attempt to broaden the outlook of the people who make the decisions for the port at Long Beach, California. It has to do with the recent attempt by COSCO (China Ocean Shipping Company) to lease the former naval facility which is now under the jurisdiction of the mayor's office and the port authority of Long Beach.

The original attempt came much too close to be ignored, and it is not likely that the parties involved with the aborted lease have given up. A bill authored by Representative Duncan Hunter would prevent business organizations under the control of a foreign power from leasing former military facilities. Recent action by the Senate-House conference committee has resulted in the insertion of a loophole into that measure. The loophole would allow the lease if the President determines that the action would not jeopardize national security. We know what Clinton would do in this case! Senator Inhofe (Oklahoma), an advocate of the Hunter bill, tried to get it through intact, but was confronted with either acceptance of the loophole or no bill at all.

Dianne Feinstein, whose husband has ties to COSCO, (owned by the Chinese military) is talking about the jobs that the lease would create. With all due respect, the local gain in economic activity is very small in comparison to overall job loss. Some sources are now estimating that China's trade deficit with us is running at $50.2 billion dollars per year. China is flooding this country with cheap toys and other cheap consumer goods. By letting her do this, we are costing the jobs of American workers in American factories, and because the deficit is so large it must be plain to almost everyone that the loss to this country far exceeds any possible local gain, and it should be plain also that we are directly contributing to the buildup of the People's Army of the Republic of China.

The security issue will not go away. How can Americans forget the Gulf War so soon? It was an oil war; we could not afford to lose the oil.

There have been many developments in this same general region since the Gulf War. American companies are over there in the Caspian Sea region competing for the right to run oil pipelines through Iran. Other companies are looking at the former Soviet Republics in Central Asia, rich in oil, if they could only get it out!

China and Japan both will be working toward building pipelines to carry oil from Central Asia eastward to the heavily populated areas on the east coast of China and on the islands of Japan. Right now, the streets of China's cities are clogged with bicycles. With Boeing, Chrysler, and other companies building factories in China her streets will soon be clogged with gas consuming vehicles. When that happens, it should not be difficult to imagine that there will be competition for the oil being produced in Central Asia. How can we be so short-sighted?

If permitting China to drain $50.2 billion dollars annually from the American economy would help her teeming masses perhaps there would be some humanitarian justification for what we are doing. However, the situation there is much like the situation here. The increased trade is benefitting only the rich multi-national corporations. Very little "trickles down." Why do you suppose the Senate forced the insertion of the loophole in Duncan Hunter's bill? Many senators have investments in companies doing business in China. The prospect of financial gain has blinded more than one person in Washington. Will it blind the mayor's office and the port authority at Long Beach? END

China Tightens Controls on Zhao

BEIJING (AP) - China's leaders tightened restrictions on the movements of a former Communist Party chief after he urged them to reconsider their view of the Tiananmen Square pro-democracy movement, a human rights group said Friday.

Zhao Ziyang is no longer allowed to leave his guarded compound in central Beijing, use the telephone or receive visitors, Human Rights in China said.

Zhao has been under house arrest since he was expelled from the party for sympathizing with the protesters in 1989. But previously he had been allowed to play golf occasionally and travel to other provinces.

The new restrictions came after Zhao appealed to party leaders at the start of their congress last month to reassess the Tiananmen Square protests, the New York-based group said.

According to reports in Taiwan and Hong Kong, the appeal raised a stir among some party elders, who suggested the congress discuss it.

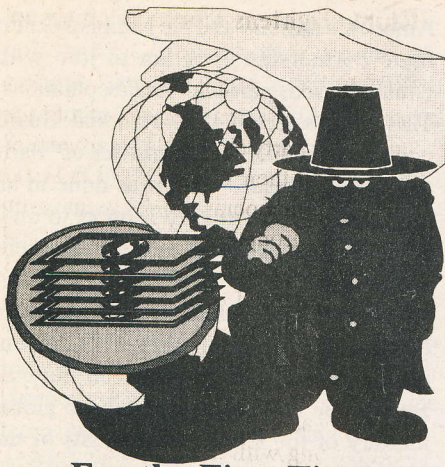

The student-led movement at the square and the military assault that crushed it have been taboo topics since senior leader Deng Xiaoping, once Zhao's mentor, had the protests declared a "counter-revolutionary rebellion." But many Chinese remain resentful of the crackdown and the lack of a full accounting for the hundreds who are believed to have died as the army swept through Beijing on June 3-4, 1989. Government offices were closed and the report by the human rights group could not be confirmed.

The authenticity of Zhao's letter also could not be confirmed. A source with links to senior party members said leaders did receive a letter from Zhao but it did not request a re-evaluation of the crackdown.

Debating the issue of Tiananmen would prove tricky for party General Secretary Jiang Zemin, who replaced Zhao following the crackdown, and damaging for Premier Li Peng, the official most publicly identified with the military attack.

Jiang used the Sept. 12-18 congress, the first since Deng's death on Feb. 19, to consolidate and demonstrate his own political power. The party holds such gatherings once every five years to set policy and decide on its leadership lineup.

Zhao has not made any public appearances since greeting students in the square on May 19, 1989, the day before Li read an order imposing martial law in Beijing. END

For the First Time, CIA Discloses Its Budget

By TIM WEINER

WASHINGTON — Abruptly abandoning 50 years of secrecy, the CIA disclosed Wednesday how much money the United States spends annually for intelligence: $26.6 billion.

With a one-sentence fax to a lawyer who sued seeking the disclosure, the CIA let fall a pillar of Cold War policy, ending its argument that obeying the Constitution's commands for a public budget would irreparably harm national security. Before Wednesday afternoon, disclosing the sum had been legally tantamount to espionage.

The decision ended a 30-year legal battle, fought in the courts and Congress, to compel the agency to comply with the Constitution, which says the government must publish a "regular statement and account" of its spending. When the agency was founded 50 years ago, the Cold War was deemed good reason to keep its budget secret.

That secrecy persisted well after the hammer and sickle came down from the Kremlin, although the spending figure was a secret poorly kept. Today the agency, which itself spends about $3 billion a year, presides over a covertly appropriated cache from which billions are drawn by other government intelligence agencies, including the National Security Agency, which conducts global eavesdropping, and the National Imagery and Mapping Agency, which makes pictures and maps from space.

The director of Central Intelligence, George Tenet, said President Clinton authorized Wednesday's disclosure, which an agency spokesman said was forced by a lawsuit under the Freedom of Information Act brought by the Federation of American Scientists, which focuses on science in public policy.

Tenet said the disclosure "does not jeopardize" national security and "serves to inform the American people." That was the precise position argued by the opponents of government secrecy who sued for publication of the sum. To defend the agency against the lawsuit, Tenet would have had to submit a sworn affidavit saying that disclosure would seriously damage national security.

That was "something that would be difficult to say" under oath, said the agency spokesman, Bill Harlow.

Kate Martin, the lawyer who filed the suit, said: "Now we can begin to have some real democratic debate on the size of the intelligence budget. The CIA's refusal to disclose the figure didn't protect the national security. It shut citizens out of the debate about the usefulness and future of the CIA."

Ms. Martin directs the Center for National Security Studies, a civil liberties group concerned with national security issues.

Her client, Steven Aftergood, who sued the CIA as director of the Federation of American Scientists' government secrecy project, said the disclosure "marks the first time since World War II that the government has acknowledged the size of its intelligence spending."

Secret spending by the Pentagon dates back at least to the Manhattan Project, which built the atomic bomb from 1941 to 1945 with $2.19 billion in covertly appropriated money, and the wartime Office of Strategic Services, which spent unaccounted millions on espionage.

With the creation of the CIA in 1947, secret spending was approved by Congress. A few powerful committee chairmen oversaw intelligence accounts as they grew to contain billions in the 1950s and '60s. They rose to about $36 billion in 1987 from about $12 billion a year in 1977, making them one of the fastest-growing elements of federal spending.

Since the mid-1980s, the Federation of American Scientists has tried to track that secret spending by carefully studying the Pentagon's budget, where intelligence programs and secret weapons projects are hidden, like the Manhattan Project, in falsely labeled accounts.

Its estimates were fairly accurate, as an accidental disclosure of $26.7 billion in military and intelligence programs by a congressional subcommittee showed in 1994. By that time, the figure was one of the CIA's worst-kept secrets.

Citizens' challenges to secret government spending date back to February 1967 when William Richardson, a 49-year-old insurance claims adjuster in Greensburg, Pa., picked up his paper and read one of the first investigative articles ever published about the CIA. Richardson, a military intelligence veteran of World War II and the Korean War, read that the agency was secretly financing American trade unions, student associations and publishing houses.

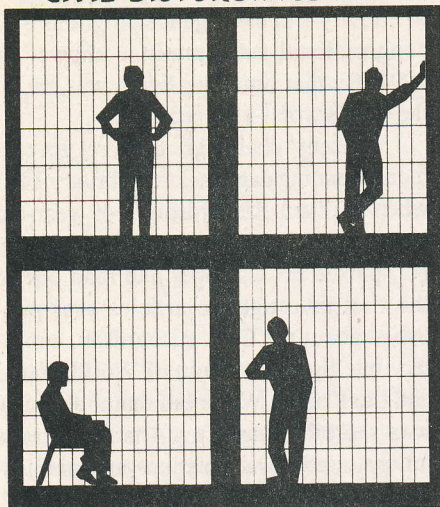

"It kind of floored me," he said in a 1989 interview. "I thought the American taxpayer, if he believed in the Constitution, didn't want his money spent to fight political wars in this country."

Richardson wrote to the United States Treasury, asking for a copy of the CIA's budget, citing the Constitution. Rebuffed, he sued in U.S. District Court. Rejected, he appealed. On July 20, 1972, the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Richardson had the right "to know how his tax money is spent."

On June 25, 1974, before the Supreme Court, Richardson lost, 5-4. The court said he had no standing to sue the government. Chief Justice Warren Burger wrote that only Congress could undo the system of secret spending; Richardson had no right to ask how his money was spent. In dissent, Justice William O. Douglas wrote: "If taxpayers may not ask that rudimentary question, their sovereignty becomes an empty symbol and a secret bureaucracy is allowed to run our affairs."

In April 1976, a Senate committee investigating the CIA strongly recommended publishing the aggregate budget. But Congress never acted. It defeated bills to do so as recently as three months ago. The Republican chairmen of the Senate and House intelligence oversight committees both opposed Wednesday's disclosure of the intelligence budget for the fiscal year 1997 and will likely oppose publication in the future. "The overseers have not been doing their job," Aftergood said Wednesday. "Congress has made every effort to block disclosure of the budget. It seems as if you want intelligence oversight nowadays, you have to do it yourself." END

CIVIL DISTURBANCE PLAN

"As nightfall does not come at once, neither does oppression. In both instances there is a twilight when everything remains seemingly unchanged. And it is in such twilight that we all must be most aware of change in the air - however slight - lest we become unwitting victims of the darkness."

Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas

This is very disturbing information obtained by the FOI, Freedom of Information Act. What is plainly visible, is that this plan includes damn near everyone who even speaks out against atrocities and abuses by the Federal Government against the PEOPLE of these united States.

If you are involved with drug reform, which most of us are, then the government, in this document, classifies YOU as a civil disturber. If you pay very, very close attention to the paragraphs below, it allows, if invoked by the president, the permission to shoot to kill anyone identified as a civil disobedience participant.

Also notice that if invoked, the National Guard become part of the European New World Order.

No more said, read and thoroughly enjoy what has and is happening to this country. Our Constitution starts out with: WE THE PEOPLE... Not anymore it doesn't.

The United States Civil Disturbance Plan 55-2.

The following information was obtained under the Freedom of Information Act. The original printing was of June 1, 1984. The information herein is UNCLASSIFIED and does not come within the scope of directions governing the protection of information affecting the national security.

It took a little more than three years to obtain a full copy of Operation Garden Plot from the U.S. Government, and was done so under the freedom of information act for unclassified documents. The implications within the full context of this document would make the hair on the back of your head stand on end.

In this document signed by the Secretary of the Army, is hereby assigned as DOD Executive Agent for civil disturbance control operations. Under Plan 55-2 he is to use airlift and logistical support, in assisting appropriate military commanders in the 50 states, District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and US possessions and territories, or any political subdivision thereof. The official name of this project is called "Operation Garden Plot."

Under this plan for the deployment of Operation Garden Plot, the use of CIDCON-1 will be mandatory. This direct support of civil disturbance control operations is to be used by the Army, USAF, Navy, and Marine Corp. with an airlift force to be comprised of MAC Organic Airlift Resources, airlift capable aircraft of all other USAF major commands, and all other aerial reconnaissance and Airborne Psychological Operations. This is to include control communications systems, aeromedical evacuation, helicopter and Weather Support Systems.

If any civil disturbance by a resistance group, religious organization, or other persons considered to be non-conformist takes place, under Appendix 3 to Annex B of Plan 55-2 hereby gives all Federal forces total power over the situation if local and state authorities cannot put down said dissenters.

Annex A, section B of Operation Garden Plot defines tax protesters, militia groups, religious cults, and general anti-government dissenters as Disruptive Elements. This calls for the deadly force to be used against any extremist or dissident perpetrating any and all forms of civil disorder. Under section D, a Presidential Executive Order will authorize and direct the Secretary of Defense to use the Armed Forces of the United States to restore order.

2 TAB A APPENDIX 1 TO ANNEX S
USAF CIVIL DISTURBANCE PLAN
55-2 EXHIBIT POR:SGH, JCS Pub 6, Vol
5, AFR 160-5 hereby provides for

America's military and the National Guard State Partnership Program to join with United Nations personal in said operations. This links selected U.S. National Guard units with the Defense Ministries of "Partnership For Peace." This was done in an effort to provide military support to civil authorities in response to civil emergencies.

Under Presidential Decision Directive No. 25, this program serves to cement people to relationships between the citizens of the United States, and the global military of the UN establishments of the emerging democracies of Central and Eastern European countries. This puts all of our National Guardsmen under the direct jurisdiction of the United Nations.

Section 3:

This plan could be implemented under any of the following situation: (1) Spontaneous civil disturbances which involve large numbers of persons and/or which continue for a considerable period of time, may exceed the capacity of local civil law enforcement agencies to suppress. Although this type of activity can arise without warning as a result of sudden, unanticipated popular unrest (past riots), it may also result from more prolonged dissidence.

This would most likely be an outgrowth of serious social, political or economic issues which divide segments of the American population. Such factionalism could manifest itself through repeated demonstrations, protest marches and other forms of legitimate opposition but which would have the potential for erupting into spontaneous violence with little or no warning.

(2) Planned acts of violence or civil disobedience which, through arising from the same causes as (1) above, are seized upon by a dedicated group of dissidents who plan and incite purposeful acts designed to disrupt social order.

This may occur either because leaders of protest organizations intentionally induce their followers to perpetrate violent acts, or because a group of militants infiltrates an otherwise peaceful protest and seeks to divert it from its peaceful course.

Subsection C: (2) Environmental satellite products will continue to be available. (d) Responsibilities. Meteorological support to civil disturbance operations will be arranged or provided by AWS wings. The 7th Weather Wing (7WW) is responsible for providing / arranging support for Military Airlift Command (MAC) airlift operations. The 5th Weather Wing (5WW) is responsible for supporting the United States Army Forces Command.

(3) SITUATION. Civil disturbance may threaten or erupt at any time in the CONUS and grow to such proportions as to require the use of the Federal military forces to bring the situation under control.

A flexible weather support system is required under control. A flexible weather support system is required to support the many and varied options of this Plan.

ANNEX H: XXOW, AWSR 55-2, AWSR 23-6, AFR 23-31, AR 115-10, AFR 105-3.

Subsection B:

Concept of Environmental Support. Environmental support will be provided by elements of Air Weather Service (AWS) in accordance with refs a-f. The senior staff meteorologist deployed into the Task Force Headquarters (TFH) will be the staff weather officer (SWO) to the TFH.

Centralized environmental support products are requested in accordance with AWSR 105-18. (4) Weather support is provided by weather units located at existing CONUS bases or by deployed SWOs and / or weather teams to the objective areas. (5) Support MAC source will be provided in accordance with the procedures in MARC 103-15. MAC forces will be provided in accordance with the procedures in AFR 105-3.

(a) Air Force Global Weather Central: Provides centralized products as requested. REFERENCES : JCS Pub 18 - Doctrine for Operations Security AFR 55-30, Operations Security

1. GENERAL Opposition forces or groups may attempt to gain knowledge of this plan and use that knowledge to prevent or degrade the effectiveness of the actions outlined in this plan. In order to protect operations undertaken to accomplish the mission, it is necessary to control sources of information that can be exploited by those opposition forces or groups.

OPSEC is the effort to protect operations by identifying and controlling intelligence indicators susceptible to exploitation. The objective of OPSEC, in the execution of this plan, is to assure the security of operations, mission effectiveness, and increase the probability of mission success.

2. RESPONSIBILITY FOR

OPERATIONS SECURITY (OPSEC):

The denial of information to an enemy is inherently a command responsibility. However, since the operations Officer at any level of command is responsible to his commander for the Overall planning and execution of operations, he has the principal staff interest in assuring maximum protection of the operation and must assume primary responsibility for ensuring that the efforts of all other staff elements are coordinated toward this end. However, every other individual associated with, or aware of, the operation must assist in safeguarding the security of the operation.

3. OBJECTIVES:

a. The basic objective of OPSEC is to preserve the security of friendly forces and thereby to enhance the probability of Successful mission accomplishment. "Security" in this context relates to the protection of friendly forces. It also includes the protection of operational information to prevent degradation of mission effectiveness through the disclosure of prior knowledge of friendly operations to the opposition.

b. OPSEC pervades the entire planning process and must be a matter of continuing concern from the conception of an operation, throughout the preparatory and execution phases, and during critiques, reports, press releases, and the like conducted during the post operation phase.

4. Specific operations orders and standard operating procedures "MUST" be developed with the awareness that the opposition may be able to identify and exploit vulnerable activities.

Outrage at US police pepper spray film

VIDEOTAPES showing police officers dabbing liquid pepper spray into the eyes of women protesters have shocked American television viewers and civil rights groups. The tapes show protesters screaming as officers pulled back their heads, opened their eyes and applied the burning substance to their eyelids with cotton swabs.

At one point a woman pleads with officers to stop torturing her and a sheriff's deputy replies: "We're not torturing you any more." John Crew, a lawyer for the American Council for Civil Liberties in San Francisco, said: "This was not one or two rogue cops in a tense situation going too far. This was a set of officers carrying out a plan in a clearly intentional manner."

The tapes were recorded by police at two anti-logging demonstrations in Humboldt County, California, where protesters had staged sit-ins. The lawsuit against Humboldt Sheriff's Department and the Eureka Police seeks damages and an order forbidding the use of the spray on "non-violent protesters".

Fortuna Police Pepper Spray Protesters

As Patrick Kimmons sat peacefully on the curb of the California Department of Forestry (CDF) parking lot, he had no idea that he was violently resisting the Fortuna Police Department. "A stream of liquid was sprayed across my eyes. Instantly my eyes started hurting more than anything I've ever experienced."

In the latest incident involving the controversial OC chemical agent, or pepper gas, more than 30 people were sprayed at a July 5 Earth First! demonstration in the city of Fortuna. And according to witnesses and victims at the scene, Fortuna police officers pepper sprayed demonstrators indiscriminately and at potentially lethal ranges, in direct violation of department guidelines.

The Fortuna Police Department strictly regulates when and how officers can use pepper spray. According to policy guidelines on the use of OC gas, officers may only use the spray "as a means of self defense from attack and to effect a lawful arrest on a violently resisting suspect." The policy guidelines further direct the officers to use the spray discriminately and at a distance of at least three feet.

GLOBAL WARMING

GLOBAL WARMING TREATY WILL CRUSH AMERICAN LABOR

By Tom DeWeese
President
American Policy Center

In December, President Bill Clinton is going to Kyoto, Japan to sign a legally binding United Nations treaty called the Climate Change protocol. Clinton intends to bind the United States to the severe economic restrictions of the treaty in the name of global warming, even though there is massive disagreement among scientists that global warming even exists.

But two facts are clear. One, the Climate Change Protocol will do nothing to protect the environment. Two, Bill Clinton's signing of the treaty will be a disaster for the American worker. The AFL-CIO Executive Council has said the treaty "...will cause the loss of high paying U.S. jobs in the mining, manufacturing, transportation and other sectors."

Here's the proof; First, scientific research through U.S. government satellite and balloon measurements shows that global temperatures are actually cooling slightly to 0.037 degrees Celsius.

There is no evidence what-so-ever of global warming caused by anything man has done. Yet our lives are being flooded with the dire prediction of global warming.

TWO KINDS OF SCIENTISTS

The White House assures us that scientists everywhere are sounding these warnings and that we may only have one chance to stop it. But, as the debate rages, we find that there really are two kinds of "scientists."

There are those who study facts and make their judgments based on what they know. Their findings are matched by other scientists, using the same data and set of circumstances. It's an age-old practice called peer reviewing. It's the only true science.

Then there are those who want a certain outcome and create the data needed to make it so. This group of scientists greatly dependent on grants supplied by those with a specific political agenda who demand desired outcomes for their money.

FLAWED COMPUTER MODELS

Americans watch nightly as weathermen, using the most up-to-date equipment available, boldly give them a five-day forecast. But, even with all of their research and expensive equipment, it really is just a "best guess." There are just too many variables. Yet those who promote the global warming theory tell you they can forecast changes in global climate decades into the future.

The truth is computer models include only two out of 14 components that make up the climate system. To include the third component would take a computer a thousand times faster than we now have. Even if the computer power existed, scientists do not understand all the factors and the relationships between them that determine the global climate.

Nearly 500 scientists worldwide signed the Heidelberg Appeal in 1992 just prior to the Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro, expressing their doubts and begging the delegates not to bind the world to treaties based on global warming. Today that figure has grown to over 4000.

A Gallup Poll of eminent North American climatologists showed that 83 percent of them debunked the global warming theory. So it is an outrage for Bill Clinton to tell you that global warming is a fact supported by the world's scientists.

THE CLIMATE CHANGE PROTOCOL

The Climate Change Protocol is a legally binding international treaty through which signing nations agree to cut back their energy emissions to 15 percent below 1990 levels. To meet such drastically-reduced energy standards will cost American labor over seven million jobs over the next decade or so. If the treaty sends the economy into a tailspin, as many predict, even more jobs will be lost to working men and women.

The treaty will cost the average family $1,000 to $4,000 per year in increased energy costs. In all likelihood there will be a tax on fuel - up to 60 cents per gallon. There will also be consumption and carbon taxes. The cost of food will skyrocket. And every single product produced with the use of energy will increase in price. Including items like aspirin, contact lenses and tooth paste.

GLOBAL RAID ON AMERICAN WEALTH

Perhaps you are still not convinced. Then ask yourself why the treaty will only bind industrial nations to its draconian emission levels.

Undeveloped Third-World nations will be free to produce whatever they want. These will include China, India, Brazil and Mexico. And guess what? 82% of the projected emissions growth in coming years are from these countries.

If the Climate Change Protocol is about protecting the environment - how come it doesn't cover everybody? The truth is the treaty is really about redistribution of wealth.

Third-World delegates to UN sessions on the Climate Change Protocol openly boast, "when the technology transfer takes place my country will begin producing this or that item." Translation - when the U.S. falls for this scheme, the Third-World will get rich.

International corporations, that owe allegiance to no nation, will scrap American labor and move their factories, lock stock and computer chip, to Third-World countries where they will be free to carry on production. That means the same emissions will be coming out of the jungles of South America instead of Chicago. So where is the protection of the environment?

Meanwhile, over seven million American workers will be jobless. America's truckers, hit with massive increases in fuel costs along with a huge reduction in items to transport, will be among the greatest victims of the treaty.

CAN IT BE STOPPED?

Bill Clinton is moving full-speed-ahead with his plan to Sign the Climate Change Protocol. When he does, the United States of America will begin a long, agonizing descent - strangled by its own hand.

The question now is; can it be stopped?

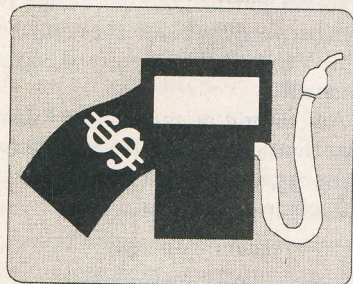

On December 5th the American Policy Center is calling for a nationwide "Strike for Liberty." Perhaps the best chance we have of stopping the treaty, APC is asking all Americans to take one hour (12 noon to 1 p.m.— your lunch break) to stop what you are doing and say "NO" to the Climate Change Protocol. Take part in a rally, call the White House or tell a friend about the dangers of the treaty.

Key to the success of this strike is the participation of truckers across the country. If the treaty is signed, American industry will leave this country, greatly reducing the goods to be hauled and sending tens of thousands of truckers to the unemployment line. Many more thousands will join them as taxes on fuel increase as much as 60 cents per gallon.

So at 12 noon on December 5, 1997, in protest of the Climate Change Protocol, join the Strike for Liberty." Maybe just pulling your rig to the side of road for one hour will be enough to let Bill Clinton know we intend to fight for our country, our jobs and our way of life.

STOP THE GLOBAL WARMING TREATY

STRIKE FOR LIBERTY!

DECEMBER 5TH, 1997

The American Policy Center has called for a "Strike For Liberty" to send a loud and clear message to the United States Senate against the Climate Change Protocol. The Strike has been called for December 5, 1997. The date was picked, not to stop Clinton from going to Kyoto, Japan, but to utilize the massive world media attention that will be focused on the treaty signing.

The Climate Change Protocol will affect every American through higher taxes, higher fuel bills, higher living expenses, higher goods and services and shortages of modern day living necessities, including medicine. It will force many businesses to leave this nation, thereby depleting jobs. Truckers will be affected by higher fuel costs and fewer products to haul. Farmers will be affected by severe restrictions on pesticides needed to grow crops. Industries directly affected will be the auto industry, oil refinery, aluminum production, cement production, chemical manufacturing, paper manufacturing and steel production.

Activists who now work on such issues as tax limitation, illegal immigration, abortion, secondary education, property rights, the United Nations and family values will be directly affected by the Climate Change Protocol.

In short, everyone in the United States will be adversely affected by this legally binding United Nations treaty. That's why the American Policy Center is asking all Americans to take one hour on one day (December 5th) to stop what you are doing and say "NO" to the Climate Change Protocol.

ORGANIZING A RALLY

The American Policy Center is NOT organizing rallies around the country. APC hasn't the time, money or man-power to organize rallies across the nation. This is the job of local activists.

However, if you would like to organize an activity in your community, APC will help promote it by placing information on our internet web page, giving time, date, location and person to contact for your rally. APC will serve as the information center for the nation-wide protest.

To setup a rally in your community you must do the following:

1. Obtain the needed permits
2. Contact local talk radio and news media to promote the event
3. Contact your local activist membership
4. Set up the program, including speakers. The program should be set up like an old-fashioned Fourth-of July celebration, full of patriotic speakers and music
5. The program should start at 12:00 noon and last approximately one hour. Rallies may be longer and start at different times, but the noon, one-hour format was chosen to accommodate workers on their lunch hours. Time and duration are entirely at the choice of the local organizers.

6. It is suggested that rally organizers invite local veterans groups such as the American Legion VFW and Vietnam Vets to participate - perhaps providing a color guard for opening ceremonies.

It is also suggested that truckers be invited to bring their rigs to the rally as well as inviting owners of classic cars and hot rods to drive them to the rally. Don't forget to invite farmers to bring their tractors. All will add greatly to the visibility and size of your strike.

7. Ask all rally participants to wear red, white and blue arm bands and hold signs such as "Global Warming is B.S. (bad science)."

8. Ask all participants to call Congress and the White House to protest the treaty.

IF YOU CANNOT ATTEND A RALLY - BUT WANT TO STRIKE

1. On December 5th, wear a red, white and blue arm band, tie a red, white and blue ribbon around your front yard tree or on your car antenna, or around your office door.
2. Drive your car with the lights on and blow your horn. Drive past your local media outlet and honk your horn.
3. Call Congress and the White House - flood the Hill with calls. Call your local news outlets. A jammed switchboard at a news outlet gets media coverage.
4. At noon, go outside your place of work and stage a mini-rally, with signs, arm bands and ribbons.

Without doubt, the two most sinister Israeli government coverups are those of the Rabin murder and the missing 4500, mostly Yemenite infants. Of the former, police and hospital records prove conclusively that the man convicted of Rabin's murder, Yigal Amir, could not possibly have committed the crime. Of the latter, Rabbi Uzi Meshulam rots in prison for daring to expose that figures from the highest levels of government kidnapped and sold the infants in the early years of the state.

What is now emerging is that the very people instrumental to the Rabin murder coverup are now in charge of the Yemenite infant whitewash.

The latest episode of the long running tug of war between Meshulam's followers and the government began this past month when graves of supposedly deceased Yemenite infants were opened in Rosh Haayin and Petach Tikveh and discovered to be empty. Days later, a kidnapped infant, now in her late forties, Tsila Levine from California had her DNA matched to an Israeli Yemenite woman, Margalit Umasey by a Hebrew University microbiologist, Dr. Hassan Hatif. This was the first scientific confirmation of the kidnappings.

The combination of the empty graves and the DNA tests shook the atmosphere at the Cohen Commission, which was appointed two years earlier by Chief Justice Meir Shamgar to investigate the alleged kidnappings on behalf of the government. The commission appointed Chief Legal Pathologist Dr. Yehuda Hiss to conduct his own tests using the same blood samples tested by Dr. Hatif.

Lo and behold, Dr. Hiss discovered that using a different test of mitrochondria, Levine and Umasey were proven not to be related. Levine countered, saying Hiss was deliberately covering up the truth. In walked Dr. Gaby Barabash, director general of the Health Ministry who, while admitting genetics was not his field, backed up Hiss's findings based on his flawless expertise.

Each of the characters have central roles in the Rabin assassination coverup.

Dr. Gaby Barabash - At 11:30 on the night of the murder, Dr. Mordechai Gutman concluded his notes. He wrote that Rabin had died of a wound through the chest which punctured the lung and shattered the backbone at Dorsal Vertebrae 5 and 6. Dr. Barabash, then director of Ichilov Hospital and later promoted to head of the entire Health Ministry, announced in a television interview a few minutes later that Rabin died of chest and spine wounds. That was the last time he told the truth about the chest wound and second last time about the shattered spine...

Because at 2 AM, Dr. Yehuda Hiss wrote his pathology report. In it, Dorsal Vertebrae 5-6 became ribs 5 and 6. Now the bullet was shot from behind, passing through the two ribs before puncturing the lung. All spinal injuries disappeared.

The conspirators demanded the changes because too many witnesses saw that Yigal Amir did not shoot Rabin through the chest and as many people saw Rabin surviving the first shot and continuing to walk. If his spinal cord was shattered that would have been impossible. Nonetheless, any honest judge would have seen the discrepancies and demanded that the conflicting medical evidence be sorted out. However, since Meir Shamgar was in charge of the commission investigating the Rabin murder, all such evidence was dismissed, even after Dr. Barabash, in a last gasp at honesty, informed the commission of the spinal injuries. And now they're all back and involved in a new coverup. The Shamgar-appointed Cohen Commission has recruited Drs. Hiss and Barabash to disprove the genetic connection between Mrs. Levine and Umasey.

So why is the government so desperate to cover up the Yemenite children affair? And why, if so many infants were kidnapped is Levine only the first to be reunited with her biological mother?

I may have been the last journalist to interview Rabbi Meshulam in prison. For the past two years, no one else has been allowed to. The explanation he gave me is nothing short of terrifying and I add, the following is his version of events and I don't necessarily subscribe to it.

With Hasidic music blasting from a tape player to muffle his voice, Meshulam claimed that in the late 1940s, the American government was conducting nuclear tests on retarded children and prisoners in Georgia. The tests were exposed and forced to cease.

At the same time, Shimon Peres was building a nuclear program from nothing. The Americans needed a new supply of guinea pig children and Peres required atomic secrets. Hence, most of the children were not adopted and their fates were too horrifying to contemplate.

If Rabbi Meshulam can actually prove such a monstrous story, it is no wonder he languishes in prison and the government has called in the Rabin whitewashers for damage control.

Needless to say, unless the truth of the alleged kidnappings is revealed to everyone's satisfaction, the wedge being driven between the political establishment and the Yemenite community will become permanent.

And unless the truth of the Rabin assassination is released, the wedge between the same politicians and the Israeli people will become equally indelible.

GUN-TOTING AGENTS STOP TEEN-AGERS IN E-TOWN

by Brian M. Christopher, Intelligencer Journal Staff

An FBI SWAT team participating in a training exercise invaded Elizabethtown square Wednesday night and searched a dozen youths at gunpoint before realizing the teen-agers were not part of the exercise, according to witnesses and the FBI.

The agents were among several hundred FBI agents and support personnel from offices in Philadelphia, Virginia and New York who were in the area this week. They were participating in what the FBI calls a "practical problem, or scenario, which is used to test procedures in a real setting, when Wednesday's incident happened, an FBI spokesperson said.

"When one of the problems was happening Wednesday night, they (the agents) ended up getting some of the locals involved," Dave Malarney, senior resident FBI agent in Harrisburg, said.

The "locals" were six teenagers in a car and six others standing nearby on a sidewalk in the square about 9:45 p.m.

Witnesses said the agents pointed guns at the youths, forced them face-down on the pavement, handcuffed them and searched them. The incident lasted about 30 minutes until agents at the scene realized something was amiss.

The FBI would not discuss details of the scenario being tested, but did say that two SWAT teams - one from Philadelphia and the other from New York - had been involved in the exercise.

Jerri Williams, an FBI spokesperson from Philadelphia, said it was the New York agents who mixed it up with the Elizabethtown youths. She said the agents from Philadelphia had completed their part of the scenario. A spokesperson at the FBI office in New York said he was unaware of the incident.

Both Williams and Malarney stressed that no local police were involved in detaining the youths. The public was not notified about the exercise, but the FBI did inform local police departments.

Williams said these exercises take place in real locations for a reason. "It's being prepared, being ready for any situation that can occur," she said. "We need to run it in a populated area to make it as real as possible.

The youths involved said it was a little too real for them. "They (the agents) kept saying, 'Are you part of it? Are you part of it?'" said Susan Lassiter, 19, who was standing with friends in the first block of East Market Street when the agents arrived.

"Part of what?" I said. "That's what we were all saying. Part of what?"

Completely decked out with body armor and helmets, but reportedly using unloaded hand guns and automatic rifles, the agents detained the youths because of the car some youths were riding in. The agents apparently thought the car was somehow tied to the training exercise.

"The condition of the car caused them to notice it," Williams said. She declined to elaborate on what it was about the Ford station wagon that piqued the agents' interest. However, witnesses to the incident believe a prominent feature of the car holds the answer.

On Sept. 17 Terry Lee Henry, 18, of Elizabethtown, and Sarah Joy Yelleys, 16, of Columbia, died when they were thrown from a car that was being driven by another Columbia teen-ager on a Conoy Township road, police said.

Several days after the crash, Tonya Leggore, 18, a friend of Henry's decorated the family car with a tribute in white shoe polish. "We will miss you, Terry" and Beep in memory of Terry" was written across the rear of the car.

One of the teens involved in the incident, who asked not to be identified, said an FBI agent said the scenario involved a connection to the current trial of Terry Nichols for his alleged role in the Oklahoma City bombing.

Also, Leggore had been cruising with her friends in the car earlier in the day near the Maytown Airport, which reportedly was being used by the FBI during the exercise.

"They (the agents.) followed us in a Suburban all the way into Rheerns," said Steve Stahl, 18, who was riding in the car with Leggore. "Then, all of a sudden, they were gone."

But not for long. A caravan of assorted slow-moving vehicles - including vans, a large, four-door pickup truck and sedans - cruised into Elizabethtown and approached the square where Leggore had parked her car to talk to friends.

"We were all there just talking," Lassiter said. The vehicles stopped at the intersection for several minutes as the group of teens looked on. The vehicles all stood still through two green lights.

And then the doors opened.

About 30 agents stormed into the street and moved toward the group of youths, witnesses said.

The youths confronted by the gun-toting agents, were shoved up against the wall of a variety store and handcuffed with plastic flex-cuffs. "They were pushing me through the wall," Casey Frey, 15, said.

After being cuffed, all of them were forced onto the sidewalk while the agents determined what had happened.

"One guy (an agent) started yelling and it was pretty obvious that they knew something was wrong," said 19-year old Jason Schwanger.

After Leggore's car was searched, witnesses said the agents began cutting the plastic cuffs off the youths.

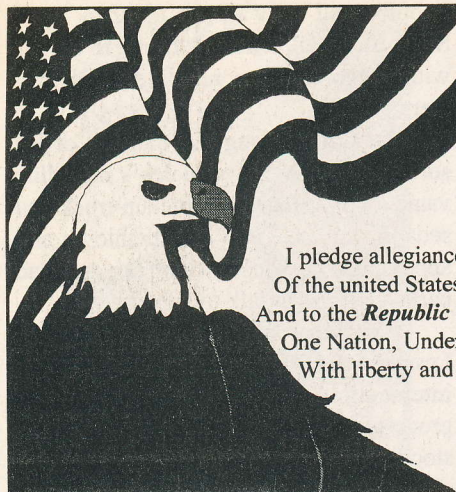

As Schwanger stood with his friends, still unsure what had just happened, one agent told him, "Don't worry, this was just a training exercise. It was just a game."

But a serious game for the FBI, which has admitted the error, Williams said. "We have taken responsibility for what happened. But this was not a blunder or a goof. When you try to make it as real as possible you are in an area where there is a possibility for a mistake and unfortunately that's what happened," she said. END

"The voice of protest, of warning, of appeal is never more needed than when the clamor of fife and drum, echoed by the press and too often by the pulpit, is bidding all men fall in step and obey in silence the tyrannous word of command. Then, more than ever, it is the duty of the good citizen not to be silent."

Civic Belief #1

Congress was given few specific powers. All else was left to the States and to the people. Ample checks and balances protect the Republic from federal tyranny.

Civic Belief #2

The Federal Government has become so powerful only because despotic officials have overstepped their strict, constitutional bounds. If #1 is true, then how did #2 happen?

The Constitution has either authorized such a government as we have had, or has been powerless to prevent it. - Lysander Spooner. The "Founding Lawyers" of 1787 left the federal fleas in control of their own flea powder, and that's why we have an unchallengeable government today. Cleverly devised to be weak, the Constitution is more form than substance, or else Freedom would ring in America. Kenneth Royce proves that the States and the American people were politically "checkmated" 210 years ago, and discusses his three peaceful solutions prior the imminent insurrection now brewing. Hologram of Liberty is truly the groundbreaking, vital analysis of the Constitution.

101 THINGS TO DO 'TIL THE REVOLUTION

by Claire Wolfe

Ideas and resources for self-liberation, monkey wrenching and preparedness

"This book is based upon the premise that, when governments turn bad, the best people ultimately become criminals. The people don't change; the laws do. Initiative, dissent, individual pleasures, and exercise of one's basic rights become 'crimes.' Obscure regulations and technical paperwork violations are used to destroy people who dare to speak their minds.

HOW AMERICANS CAN BUY AMERICAN

By Roger Simmermaker

Do you know who owns our restaurants, hotels, supermarkets and department stores? The answers to these questions determine where the profits go, where the taxes are paid, and which national economy benefits.

How Americans Can Buy American clears the confusion of who owns what on a wide range of products and services, so we can combine buying American-made with American-owned. This will help keep profits and jobs within our borders, strengthen American companies and the American economy, and help restore national sovereignty.

The Franklin Cover-up

The shut-down of Omaha, Nebraska's Franklin Community Federal Credit Union, raided by federal agencies in November 1988, sent shock waves all the way to Washington, D.C. $40 million was missing. The credit union's manager: Republican Party activist Lawrence E. "Larry" King, Jr., behind whose rise to fame and riches stood powerful figures in Nebraska politics and business, and in the nation's capital.

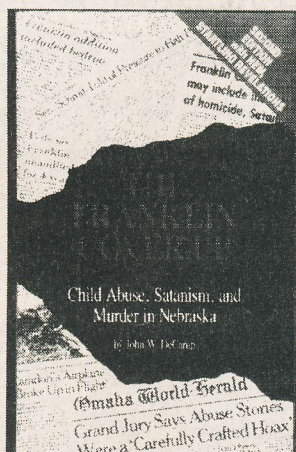

In the face of opposition from local and state law enforcement, from the FBI, and from the Powerful Omaha World-Herald newspaper, a special Franklin committee of the Nebraska Legislature launched its own probe. What looked like a financial swindle, soon exploded into a hideous tale of drugs, Iran-Contra money-laundering, a nationwide child abuse ring, and ritual murder.

Nineteen months later, the legislative committee's chief investigator died—suddenly, and violently, like more than a dozen other people linked to the Franklin case.

Author John DeCamp knows the Franklin scandal from the inside. In 1990, his "DeCamp memo" first publicly named the alleged high-ranking abusers. Today, he is attorney for two of the abuse victims.

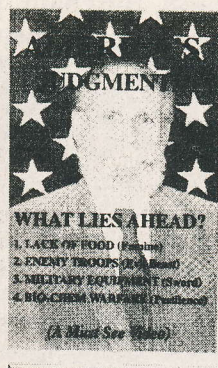

Using documentation never before made public, DeCamp lays bare not only the crimes, but the cover-up—a textbook case of how dangerous the corruption of institutions of government, and the press, can be. In its sweep and in what it portends for the nation, the Franklin cover-up followed the ugly precedent of the Warren Commission.

THE OFFICIAL POCKET MEDICAL SURVIVAL MANUAL

Robert W. Pelton

$15.00

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

What would you and your family do if one of you fell and fractured a leg while hiking in the mountains? What if you were bitten by a rattlesnake? Did you know that ordinary household laundry bleach can be used as a preventative medicine? Did you know that cayenne pepper sprinkled on a wound will stop bleeding and promote healing?

Emergency medical treatment must sometimes be given someone when no trained professionals are on hand. THE OFFICIAL POCKET MEDICAL SURVIVAL MANUAL was specifically designed for such a situation. Keep a copy of THE OFFICIAL POCKET MEDICAL SURVIVAL MANUAL in your home and another in the glove compartment of your vehicle. It can even be carried in your shirt pocket, slipped down in your boot, or in a backpack. Every hunter should carry a copy when out trekking through the woods. The same is true of fishermen, scouts, hikers, back-packers, campers, those in the military and a multitude of others.

NARCO-POLITICS

GOD BLESS JESSE HELMS

By James Smith

For the moment, let's forget that by last count, William F. Weld, (the former Governor of Massachusetts), a.k.a., "Big Bill," Big Red," and some other names alas...we cannot print, was worth a mere $92 million! Yep! He's close to poverty.

And while we consider that fact, and let's talk about Senator Jessie Helms. There are absolutely two facts that are known about Jessie Helms: (1). he is very Republican: (2). he was very right about not wanting Bill Weld as the Ambassador to Mexico.

Now let's talk about the real truth that kept "Big Red" out of Mexico. Helms said that Big Red admitted to smoking pot in his youth, and that reason alone kept Big Red out of Mexico, but the truth is known on Capitol Hill, and here it is.

In December 1975, February and March 1976, 106 (cargo) plane loads of cocaine were flown out of Colombia, into Albright Air Station, in Panama, where the planes were met by several VIP's, including Colonel Noriega.n.1/

Between late 1976, and 1981, the cocaine was transported out of Panama north to Costa Rica, El Salvador, and Honduras. Mind you, it was between 1976 and 1980, that Hamilton Jordan in the Carter White House admitted to having a cocaine addiction. (Now there's a news flash for you!).

At least one country, Costa Rica, indicted the whole bunch of cocaine cowboys named in the Iran-Contra, i.e., Ollie North, Richard Secord, George Bush, that gang, and the ranch of John Hull was cited as a lay over and airport used to traffic cocaine, and it was even alleged by the Costa Rican government that the American DEA helped Hull flee Costa Rican one step ahead of the long arm of Costa Rican justice. n.2/

Between 1982 and 1989, the same cocaine was moved into North America. In specific, it was flown into the tiny airport of Mena, Arkansas, where the IRS, FBI, Dept. of Justice, (DOJ), State and Local Police all began to keep extensive records of investigations relating to the CIA-Mena Cocaine Operation.

This operation was known to (then) Governor Bill Clinton, who did nothing about it. n.3/

Once the American people in Arkansas began to inquire about the CIA-Mena Cocaine Operation, the DOJ intervened and began to engage damage control and put their own spin on the illegal operation. At the height of the Mena Operation, between 1986-1988, the head of the Criminal Division of the DOJ, Bill Weld, virtually shut down the U.S. Senate Investigation into Mena, by Senator John Kerry, (D-MA.), and the Kerry Narco-Terrorist Subcommittee.

Weld did this by refusing to allow or enforce subpoenas for any evidence that Kerry needed for his committee. Kerry's subcommittee's Special Counsel, Jack Blum specifically identified Bill Weld as being the single individual who shut down the investigation into the Mena Operation, which involved both Bill Clinton, and George Bush.n.4/

Now, do I have your attention? Because it gets stranger as time goes on.

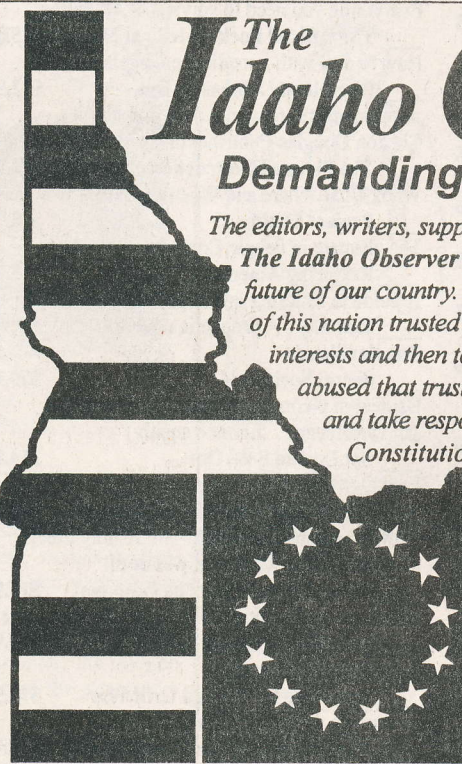

The 1988 Report, "Drugs, Law Enforcement, And Foreign Policy," produced by Senator Kerry's Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee stated in connection with Grand Jury investigations into the Mena Operation: "Despite the availability of evidence sufficient for an indictment on money laundering charges, and over the strong objections of state and federal law enforcement officials, the indictments were dropped. The apparent reason was that the prosecution might have revealed national security information."

If you think that Kerry did the right thing, guess again. Kerry was in the corner of Bill Weld from the beginning. WHY? Because when Bill Weld was the U.S. Attorney for Massachusetts in 1985, one year prior to becoming head of the DOJ Criminal Division, Weld had given the Bank of Boston a sweet heart deal after the Bank of Boston was caught red handed, laundering $2 Billion.

Weld allowed the Bank of Boston to plead guilty, without even considering any of the senior bank officials for criminal indictments. The same senior officials not only rubbed elbows with John Kerry as a U.S. Senator, and contributed to his election finances, but also contributed to his election finances when Kerry was the Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts.

Now think for a moment, where was John Kerry when Bill Weld was fighting Jessie Helms to become the Ambassador to

The Idaho Observer possible are all deeply concerned for the future of our country. America is in trouble because the people of this nation trusted their elected officials to protect their abused that trust. Unless we as a free people wake up

"Fort Peck Reservation's Twilight Zone"

October 21, 1997
Black Ops Reporter
by Chip Tatum

Three weeks ago The Blacks Ops Reporter ran a feature story which mentioned Circle, Montana attorney Arnie Hove's attempt to get authorities to look at official corruption in northern Montana. The result of Hove's efforts is that the entrenched Montana criminal cartels are now targeting Hove. Unfortunately for Hove, members of the criminal enterprise include State and Federal officials.

Still a lot of positive news has occurred on the Fort Peck Reservation around Hove and others working to stop the drug corruption. News that points to the efforts of two courageous tribal lay advocates who work with Hove, Melissa Buckles and Florence Youpee, offers great optimism.

The drug cartels have good reasons to be after Arnie Hove. Hove has caused them some big problems after his former client, Clint Mullen came forward and identified a Sidney lawyer as having solicited him to haul drugs from Canada to the US in his trucking operation. When Mullen refused, Mullen and his wife were brutally beaten outside a nightspot near Sidney at the apparent instigation of an another attorney associated with the Montana Supreme Court Commission on Practice.

Hove and others began to realize that something was terribly wrong in the investigation around the Mullen beating. Witnesses were threatened and intimidated by law enforcement. But even more surprisingly, Ray Tomalino's calls to the FBI office in Glasgow, concerning the threats made on his daughter, a witness to the Mullen beating, were ignored. A fact pattern is emerging on the Fort Peck Reservation which may explain why other complaints of felony witness intimidation were also ignored. The pattern may clarify links to a series of as many as 56 drug related homicides in Montana linked to official corruption. The deaths are known in Montana as "The Hi-Line Murders." Nowhere are the awful effects of the Hi-Line murders more apparent than the Fort Peck Reservation.

The Fort Peck Reservation was established by executive order in 1851 for the peaceful Assiniboiné Tribe who traditionally occupied the Missouri valley lands in what is now western North Dakota and eastern Montana. The majority Sioux population later merged with the Assiniboiné after their spectacular victory over Custer at Little Big Horn under Chief Sitting Bull. The Fort Peck Reservation runs east of Porcupine Creek along the Missouri river, and (along the Burlington Northern "Hi-Line" rail line) to the western North Dakota border then extends north toward the Canadian border. The two largest reservation towns are county seat Wolf Point and tiny Poplar both situated on the "Hi-Line" rail line just north of the Missouri River in far eastern Montana.

Melissa Buckles and Florence Youpee were concerned about strange things that were happening on the reservation. The two tribal lay advocates- who work in the tribal courts- began to ask questions about repeated accounts that tribal police and FBI agents were involved in drug dealing. Witnesses began to come forward with stories of beatings and intimidations of people who were speaking out against the drug ring. The drug ring was clearly linked to the authorities.

Youpee and Buckles also began to hear from tribal members who spoke of a series of clandestine landing strips on the northern edge of the reservation on the Canadian border, and on the west of the reservation to the east of Porcupine Creek near the abandoned Glasgow Air Force Base. What the ladies did not know, as the reports first came in, was that the landing strips and late night sightings of planes being unloaded, and parachute drops of duffel bags were being made, was that the two lay advocates may have stumbled into one of the largest smuggling operations in world history! This operation originated from a group of corrupt FBI agents including Florida FBI agent Terry Nelson, and a number of Colombian drug cartels.

What the ladies stumbled onto may also explain many of the 40+ homicides that have plagued the Fort Peck Reservation. Deaths which are acknowledged, but for which the official explanation sounds more like "twilight zone" rhetoric - invariably the person "just died."

The "twilight zone" explanations become even more astounding when juxtaposed along side the documentation of key evidence disappearing during murder and drug trials and then reappearing in the evidence locker afterwards. Or the "twilight zone" beating of officer Bruce Bauer by five law enforcement personnel while Bauer was being treated at Trinity hospital in Wolf Point. An investigator, working under the supervision of FBI agents James Wixon and Scott Cruise, later, according to sworn depositions, intimidated two of the nurse witnesses and tried to get them to falsely change their testimony. Or the "twilight zone" explanations as to why FBI agent James Wixon had recently retired to his sizable cattle ranching operation (acquired during his tenure as a full time agent in Glasgow) and why FBI agent Scott Cruise had been transferred out of the Glasgow office.

The "twilight zone" riddles of the Fort Peck Reservation can be answered from an outside perspective. I am a retired intelligence officer and I have worked for a variety of government agencies including the CIA. During the Reagan and Bush administrations I worked on many projects directly for the White House and the National Security Council. During the course of my involvement with the ultra-secret OSG-3, in 1989, I was advised face-to-face by FBI agent Terry Nelson that he was managing a smuggling operation into the United States in conjunction with Fabio Ochoa, a Colombian drug lord, and a Canadian national with intelligence connections, and a penchant for smuggling tons of cocaine named Mike Huxtable.

According to Terry Nelson, the routes of the drug shipments were from Colombia north to the Bahamas then out into the Atlantic, doubling back west to Nova Scotia and Quebec. One airfield used by the Huxtable smuggling operation was the Chapeau airstrip in Quebec. From eastern Canada the drug shipments were flown to a staging area on a property just south of Weyburn, Saskatchewan. The drug shipments were then flown onto airstrips in or near Sidney, Chinook, Havre and several other locations in Montana and North Dakota.

The drug operation involved the smuggling of billions of dollars worth of heroin and cocaine into the United States. Fabio Ochoa used the Mike Huxtable scheme because it got around the southern air radar which was beginning to intercept too many shipments. FBI agent Terry Nelson recruited local law enforcement and others in Montana and North Dakota to get the cocaine into the United States.

But trouble developed in Chinook. A local newsmen, Mike Perry, and four law enforcement officers made reports to the authorities that they were observing drug shipments. Mike Perry took one sheriff's deputy to meet with then US Attorney, Pete Dunbar in Billings. The official explanation was again "twilight zone" - no evidence could be found, and in fact the four Chinook law enforcement officers who reported the drug flights were all fired.

Trouble also developed in Sidney. Dozens of witnesses reported drug flights and drug dealing by a prosecuting attorney and police detective. Again, after the investigation "nothing was there." It was only "rumor" or "false reports." The same pattern existed in Havre. In each of the three smuggling towns early unusual deaths haunted people who tried to do something about the drug problems.

Surprisingly, FBI agents Scott Cruise and James Wixon were continually tasked with investigating the drug and murder allegations. Both agents operated in Glasgow where the smuggling pilots would rest in condominiums (owned by the conspirators), adjacent to Glasgow Air Force Base - just eight miles west of a series of off - the map air strips near Porcupine Creek on Fort Peck Reservation. The two agents couldn't find any credible evidence.

During the next few days and weeks further startling information will surface. Promised bank transfer documentation may come to light that should explain much of the frustration many individuals have had in understanding the "twilight zone" in Montana along the Canadian border. At the same time, Melissa Buckles and Florence Youpee have gathered a dozen new affidavits and statements on the Fort Peck Reservation. Arnie Hove advises that he has been followed when he returns to Circle from the reservation. Buckles, Youpee, and Hove all are concerned that law enforcement has circulated a false rumor that Arnie Hove is bringing "all the crystal meth onto the reservation."

The entire reservation is listening to the trio and something will be done. But the three should be extremely cautious, because they are snooping around the edges of one of the largest drug smuggling operations in world history. A drug operation which has left many witnesses dead. There is a very real danger in the "twilight zone" on Fort Peck Reservation. These three individuals need your support.

In all tyrannical governments the supreme magistracy, or the right both of making and enforcing the laws, is vested in one and the same man, or one and the same body of men; and wherever these two powers are united together, there can be no public liberty.

FUROR MOUNTS OVER BUSH HONOR AT UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO.

The decision by the University of Toronto to offer George Bush an honorary degree has triggered furious protests, including a mobilization by faculty and students to prevent the honor from taking place. One professor has mobilized over 100 other faculty members to sign a letter of objection to U of T president Robert Prichard. The open letter, published in the student newspaper, Varsity, states: "[W]e consider Mr. Bush to be an inappropriate candidate for such an honor. During Mr. Bush's term as director of the CIA, the agency engaged in well-documented cases of illegal activity. While he was Vice-President, the Reagan administration's policies in Nicaragua led it to be condemned by the World Court. During his own term as President, the United States invaded Panama. Other examples of similar misconduct could be cited."

In addition, a broad-based letter-writing campaign on and off campus has been launched to condemn the decision to honor Bush. In an letter to Varsity, OPIRG coordinator Elena Lonero says that honoring Bush would be a disgrace because of his role in the "corrupt Iran-Contra affair and the bloodshed of the Gulf War."

N. Korea targeting U.S. troops

By Bill Gertz

THE WASHINGTON TIMES

A former North Korean army colonel said Sept. 25 that, despite food shortages and economic problems, the North Korean military is growing stronger and could attack South Korea and U.S. troops in Japan with nuclear or chemical weapons.

"I can tell you North Korea is ready for modern war in terms of the economic preparations, materials and all, as well as psychologically," Col. Joo-hwal Choi, the highest-ranking military officer ever to defect from the communist state, said in a luncheon meeting with reporters and editors of The Washington Times.

If war breaks out, the main targets will be the 37,000 U.S. troops in South Korea, as well as U.S. forces deployed in Japan, he said. North Korea is developing two long-range missiles, the Nodong and Taepodong, which will be used in the attacks, Col. Choi said, speaking through an interpreter.

The North Korean strategy is to use missile attacks to inflict up to 20,000 U.S. casualties as soon as possible so political support for the conflict in the United States will evaporate, he said. "Their readiness is unquestioned. The key question is when they will choose to wage war," he said.

According to Col. Choi, who defected in 1995, North Korean forces are prepared to attack South Korea under three scenarios: following a U.S. troop withdrawal from South Korea; amid social instability in South Korea; or if the United States is distracted during a regional conflict in another part of the world.

Col. Choi said U.S. and South Korea analysts have underestimated North Korea's military capability, a flaw that could lead to a major miscalculation.

The food crisis is not as widespread in North Korea as believed and does not affect the entire population, he noted. Moreover, even though the economic system is faltering, "on the military side, production of military goods and supplies is running at full capacity."

"No matter what happens on the economic side... as long as South Korea and the United States allow the situation to remain as it is, the military side of North Korea will continue to expand and become stronger and stronger," Col. Choi said.

Getting North Korea to become "more transparent" about its nuclear and chemical weapons and missile programs should take precedence over worries about famine, he said.

Before his defection, Col. Choi, 48, was a senior official at a trading company that sold goods overseas to raise hard currency for the North Korean military.

He was recalled to Pyongyang after being accused of leaking state secrets to South Korea and left a wife and two children behind. "I don't know what happened to them," he said.

Col. Choi said North Korea has had an active program to build nuclear weapons since the 1970s and that he participated in collecting nuclear technology while posted as a military attache in what was then Czechoslovakia.

Most North Koreans believe that Pyongyang possess two to three nuclear devices that were built prior to the 1993 agreement with the United States aimed at halting the weapons program, he said.

Young-Hwan Ko, a former North Korean diplomat who joined Col. Choi in a visit to the United States, said North Korea believes its relations with the United States are the key to all diplomatic relations in the North Asian region.

"Like Col. Choi, I am not 100 percent sure North Korea already has a nuclear bomb, but what is a fact is that North Korea has tried for a long time to acquire the necessary technology and develop their capability for nuclear bombs."

Col. Choi and Mr. Ko now work in Seoul, researching the political situation in North Korea.

Accompanied by South Korean embassy officials, they are on an American tour meeting with lawmakers, analysts and journalists about the situation on the Korean peninsula.

North Korea's withdrawal from the nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty in 1993 was a clear sign that Pyongyang has a certain nuclear weapons capability, Mr. Ko said.

The current project to build less threatening nuclear reactors in North Korea has not affected Pyongyang's nuclear weapons program up to 1993, he said.

Neither Col. Choi nor Mr. Ko was optimistic that the Korean Peninsula will be reunified peacefully. They said tensions will remain as long as North Korean leader Kim Chong-il remain in power. END

JUST A COINCIDENCE?

Several days after refusing to settle her sexual harassment case against President Clinton, Paula Jones was informed that she was being audited. Twenty-one Republican members of Congress immediately wrote letters of protest, calling the audit "retaliatory and politically motivated." They just don't understand the power of coincidence.

A wide range of conservative organizations have also been selected for audits recently. These include the National Rifle Association, the Heritage Foundation, Americans for Tax Reform, and others. Many of these groups have complained, citing the fact that no liberal organizations have been selected for audits. Another failure to understand the power of coincidence.

Billy Dale was fired from the White House Travel Office in 1993, supposedly at the behest of Hillary Rodham Clinton. He was audited shortly thereafter. It so happens that the head of the IRS at the time was Margaret Milner Richardson, a close personal friend of the First Lady. Those that don't understand the power of coincidence have a hard time figuring this one out.

The IRS began auditing the Western Journalism Center last year. It also happens that the center was the only media outlet targeted for "action" in a 1994 White House memo dealing with media coverage of administration scandals. Roll of the dice.

In July of 1996 Patricia Mendoza yelled "You suck" at President Clinton while he was campaigning in Chicago. Within a month she was notified that she would be audited. The IRS also threatened to seize her property. However, once the matter was widely publicized the IRS decided that a computer error was responsible for the investigation into Ms. Mendoza, and they dropped the matter. (See — it's really the fault of those damn computers!)

Then there is the case of Kent Masterson Brown, who filed suit to open up the secret health care task force commanded by Mrs. Clinton. He also got his audit notice within a month.

Yes indeed, we believe in coincidence. We also believe that nice guys finish first, that good always triumphs over evil, and that the Daily Outrage will eventually secure venture capital funding. But we're beginning to have some questions about Santa.... END

U.S. APPROVED USE OF MILITARY AGAINST CITIZENRY

<http://www.TheWinds.org/arcidx.html>

In previously classified documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, it was revealed that "top officials in the Carter Administration gave prior approval to South Korean contingency plans to use military units against" student and labor demonstrations occurring in South Korea in 1980.

In a copyrighted article published in the Journal of Commerce, Feb. 27, 1996, reporter Tim Shorrock disclosed the contents of the government documents detailing President Carter's position in regard to the heavy-handed application of the South Korean military against its own citizens. It was further revealed that the Carter Administration "knew that those contingency plans included using Korean Special Forces, trained to fight behind the lines in a war against North Korea, against the pro-democracy opposition movement."

As a direct result of the United States' secret approval of the use of elite Korean Special Forces to quell the student riots, hundreds were massacred in an incident that brought attention worldwide.

The FOIA documents are in direct opposition to claims made by the State Department concerning the student protests. Those claims released in a 1989 publication called the "White Paper" took the hypocritical posture of expressing alarm at South Korea's military leaders threatening force against the demonstrations. They also claimed that they had no advance notice that the Special Forces would be employed.

The top secret documents disclose that knowledge of the communications link between the U.S. and the Republic of Korea, code named "Cherokee", were strictly limited to "President Carter and his Secretary of State, Deputy Secretary of State, Warren Christopher, Assistant Secretary of State for East Asia and Pacific, Richard C. Holbrooke and top intelligence officials at the National Security Council."—and the U.S. Ambassador to South Korea, William J. Gleysteen.

Ambassador Gleysteen, perfectly reflecting the Carter Administration's stance on Korea's use of its military against its own citizens, stated, "In none of our discussions will we in any way suggest that the USG [United States Government] opposes ROKG [Republic of Korea Government] contingency plans to maintain law and order, if absolutely necessary, by reinforcing the police with the army." Warren Christopher, who would become Secretary of State under Clinton, responded, "We agree that we should not oppose ROK contingency plans to maintain law and order."

The revelation of de facto U.S. approval of the use of another nation's military against its unarmed citizens is ominous at best. When one considers that the moral character of American government has continued to severely steepen the curve of its decline in the sixteen years since this incident, it leaves virtually no hope for democracy in this nation.

This diplomatic action by the Carter Administration carries a heavy burden of hypocrisy with it in light of the Posse Comitatus Act. This act of Congress, established in 1878, forbade the use of the United States Army against its own citizens. (It was later revised in 1956 to include other branches of the U.S. military). For this country to approve of, and, indeed encourage, such action in other countries reveals a specter on America's political horizons of apocalyptic substance. If the U.S. Executive Branch can give tacit approval to the use of military force by another "democratic" country against its own citizens, how far can we be removed from the same actions by the United States military upon U.S. citizens?

Has this nation already acted in violation of the Posse Comitatus Act? Would the horrifying images of tanks, armored personnel carriers and other weapons of war used in the assault on the Branch Davidian compound in Waco fit the scenario of violation?

The Korean Special Forces, it was earlier stated, were specifically trained for combat behind enemy lines with North Korea. When a nation uses the same soldiers, the same bullets, the same armament to kill its unarmed citizens as it would its enemies, does that not make its own citizens its enemies? The bullets don't know the difference. Those student demonstrators are just as dead as would be the North Koreans were those bullets used on them. It does not take the proverbial rocket scientist to see that the only thing of any value to the respective governments involved in this travesty is merely political survival. Anyone opposed to that is considered an enemy worthy of death.

President Bush once made the comment that when a nation turns its weapons of war against its own citizens, it cannot stand. In a nation that has become more fearful of its citizens rights and freedoms than protective of them, Bush's comment appears prophetic.

Jesus said, "Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand."

In light of this government's approval of South Korea's actions and its own against U.S. citizens, we may know that this house is truly divided against itself.

U.S. Taxpayers Bail Out Another Third World Dictator On Behalf of NWO

One more nation down. Indonesia is now under the absolute control and whim of the supranational institutions. Whatever progress Indonesia managed in the latter part of the 20th century, will now be totally reversed and she will be returned to her original status: 16th century serfdom/agrarian society. Such is the stuff of interdependence, in the name of "peace and universal brotherhood," of course. Mr. Camdessus, chief IMF sharksman, is just doing his job, and is very well rewarded for his obedience.

Our turn is coming. The IMF "ordered" the Federal Reserve several weeks ago to raise interest in the US and implement "austerity measures" to "stabilize the stock market and the over heated economy." Just a few weeks before the stock market became quite volatile. INTERESTING!

IMF Giving Indonesia $23B Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) - The International Monetary Fund announced a $23 billion economic rescue package for Indonesia on Friday, the second-largest such bailout in history, as authorities scrambled to contain a currency crisis that has rattled financial markets from Tokyo to New York.

The United States said it would provide backup assistance, a reversal for the Clinton administration, which had refused to participate directly in a $17.5 billion rescue effort for Thailand two months ago because of controversy generated by the 1995 U.S. bailout of Mexico.

Both the administration and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan had become increasingly worried in recent days that the continuing economic turmoil in Southeast Asia was threatening to destabilize financial markets worldwide.

A severe plunge of the Hong Kong stock market last week was the triggering event for Monday's record 554-point stock loss on Wall Street, dramatically underscoring how interconnected the world economy has become.

The IMF package of $23 billion for Indonesia, which has the world's fourth-largest population, will be backed up by $3 billion in U.S. loans plus additional assistance from Japan, China, Singapore, Malaysia, Hong Kong and Australia.

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin, in announcing the administration's decision, emphasized that direct U.S. loans would serve only as a second line of defense should the initial $23 billion fail to stabilize the economic situation in Indonesia. But he insisted that American businesses and workers have a lot at stake.

"Financial stability around the world is critical to the national security and economic interests of the United States," Rubin said. "In today's global economy, the health and prosperity of the American economy depend importantly on the stability of the global financial system and the economic health of our trading partners."

The package of initial and backup support was expected to total more than $35 billion, making it the second-largest rescue package in IMF history after the $50 billion made available for Mexico.

The administration took the lead in putting together the Mexican assistance package; some European nations went along reluctantly. When Congress balked, President Clinton exercised his authority to use the Exchange Stabilization Fund, created in the 1930s to support the dollar.

U.S. support for Mexico ultimately totaled $12 billion in loans, which Mexico finished paying back earlier this year.

The administration said it would use the same stabilization fund for the $3 billion for Indonesia. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee and a leading critic of the Mexican bailout, indicated he would support the effort. "The administration's plan is intended to promote stability," D'Amato said, pledging to closely monitor Treasury's handling of the situation.

The House Banking Committee chairman, Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, also voiced his support, saying he felt the U.S. participation was appropriate given that the IMF and other multinational lending organizations were taking the lead.

But conservative commentator Pat Buchanan, a leading opponent of the 1995 rescue effort for Mexico, said it was an "outrage that American taxpayers are being put on the hook again to bail out these corrupt and incompetent governments."

IMF Managing Director Michel Camdessus said the IMF will provide the largest share of the package, $10 billion, with $4.5 billion coming from the World Bank, $3.5 billion from the Asian Development Bank and $5 billion from Indonesia's own assets.

In exchange for the economic support, Indonesia agreed to a series of economic reforms, including shutting unhealthy banks, reducing food subsidies, removing trade barriers and ending inefficient state monopolies.

Indonesian President Suharto, 76, who has governed the country for 32 years, has tolerated little political dissent but until earlier this year when speculators pounded the Indonesian currency, he had been able to deliver sustained economic development.

Critics complain that the Indonesian economy is dominated by a small group of his family members and close associates who run state monopolies and other inefficient industries.

Indonesia becomes the third Asian nation this year to seek IMF assistance because of currency turmoil. In July, the IMF approved a $1 billion loan for the Philippines and in August put together a $17.5 billion package for Thailand. The currencies of Malaysia, Hong Kong and Singapore have also come under heavy selling pressure this year.

COVER-UP OF CHINA'S GENDER-CIDE

by Joseph Farah

The World Health Organization is not one of my favorite groups, but last Friday the United Nations agency released a paper that should have prompted front-page headlines around the globe.

The report, released at WHO's Regional Committee for the Western Pacific, said more than 50 million women were estimated to be "missing" in China because of the institutionalized killing and neglect of girls due to Beijing's population control program that limits parents to one child.

Many of the girls were killed while still in the womb — the victims of ultrasound technology that revealed the baby's sex. Others, WHO said, were starved to death after birth, the victims of violence or were not treated when they became ill.

The report's statistics showed that in 1994, 117 boys were born for every 100 girls in China. Though baby girls tend to have a higher survival rate than boys, that natural process has been dramatically reversed in China by infanticide, gross neglect, maltreatment and malnutrition of females in a culture that regards boys as more desirable — especially when couples get only one chance at parenthood.

The trend transcends the infancy stage, too, the report shows. Girls are at higher risk than boys of dying before the age of five in China — despite their natural biological advantages.

"In many cases, mothers are more likely to bring their male children to health centers — particularly to private physicians — and they may be treated at an earlier stage of disease than girls," the paper reported.

Just to put this story in perspective, WHO is documenting what can only be described as the biggest single holocaust in human history — and doing it in a surprisingly clinical and low-key fashion. Nevertheless, it's stunning, breathtaking news, by any standard. Once again, it shows, centralized, command-and-control government planning has resulted in a slaughter of the innocents. It's news that cries out for a new word in our vocabulary — "gender-cide."

But I'll bet you didn't read it in any establishment newspaper in America. And I will guarantee you didn't see it reported on the network news. So, was this story just missed by the big media? Was it reported only by some obscure foreign news agency?

No. And this is the biggest shocker of all. The story was reported by the Associated Press in Sydney, Australia. Now, just so you understand, the Associated Press in Sydney is the very same Associated Press that serves as a cooperative news agency here. Yet, the world's largest news-gathering organization did not see fit to include the dispatch on its world wire in the West. Apparently, it just wasn't deemed newsworthy enough. It was dismissed as a story of interest only in Asia — a regional issue.

This strikes me as one of the most colossal of bad news judgments — one that smacks of pure ideologically driven, pro-abortion, pro-population-control, pro-China bias at the national news desk of the Associated Press. What else could possibly explain the spiking of such a news story? Was someone asleep at the switch in Washington? If so, where's the apology?

And where's the followup? What an opportunity the Associated Press and other news agencies have to gather reaction to this tragic story. Wouldn't you love to hear what the National Organization of Women and other population-control apologists have to say about the snuffing out of more than 50 million little girls in one generation? Somehow, I doubt we'll ever see it. Because the story was ignored by the establishment press, official cover has been provided to the abortion zealots to dismiss the WHO statistics. Instead, we'll no doubt hear from one of them in the future about how effective the Beijing regime has been in curtailing population growth.

Of course, it's not unusual for the establishment press in the freest nation in the world to miss some of the biggest stories. What is remarkable in this case is the deliberateness of it. A conscious decision was made in Washington to exclude this story from the domestic news budgets of thousands of newspapers across the United States that rely principally on the Associated Press for their national and international news.

I feel certain that someday God is going to judge parents who kill their children. He's also going to judge governments that encourage — even force — such murders. But there's got to be a special little place in Hell reserved for those who, aware of such barbarity, go out of their way to cover it up.

"WE ARE TAKING THE LAW AND BENDING IT AS FAR AS WE CAN TO CAPTURE A WHOLE NEW CLASS OF GUNS"

According to Jose Cerda a "White House official who specializes in gun control policy." Mr. Cerda was quoted in a Los Angeles Times story today, in response to a proposed presidential memorandum that would prohibit the import of a host of semi-automatic firearms. The story noted an imminent presidential directive that would halt the issuance of new import licenses while it reviews the "sporting purposes" criteria for certain guns. Simply put, this latest Clinton-Gore Administration initiative bans guns that conform in every way to the legal requirements of the Administration's own 1994 gun ban.

Clearly, this represents the next link in the Clinton-Gore Administration's gun ban chain — a preview if you will of the 1998 Clinton Gun Ban. You've heard the verbiage before. The terminology used to justify assaults on our rights. For example, recall not too long ago, the gun ban lobby in California was working to ban so-called "junk guns," using the "logic" that if these guns don't meet the requirements for importation, why should they be legally manufactured in the U.S.? Well, that mantra, and the Clinton propaganda machine, is again in full swing using that same logic.

This latest development is unfortunate, but not surprising. For years, the National Rifle Association of America has argued that bans on firearms are worthless measures that impact only law-abiding citizens. Moreover, we have said that cosmetic features — or lack thereof — do not impact the way firearms function. Accordingly, we have predicted that the Clinton Gun Ban of 1994 would merely lead to more bans encompassing more guns than ever before. With unmistakable clarity, the Clinton-Gore Administration has confirmed both our appraisals and our forecast.

A press release issued today by the rabidly anti-gun Violence Policy Center says it all, "A White House plan to stop allowing the import of slightly modified assault weapons is only a first step toward closing gaping loopholes in the federal ban on these weapons."

This information is provided as a service of the National Rifle Association Institute for Legislative Action, Fairfax, VA. This and other information on the Second Amendment and the NRA is available at: <http://WWW.NRA.Org>

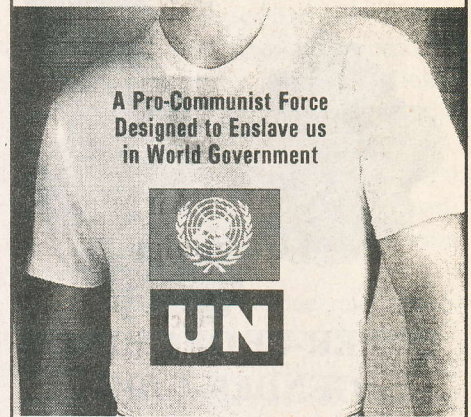

If there is an inexpensive imported semi-automatic rifle that you wish to purchase, your opportunity is almost gone. The impact of this has already made itself felt. No one who was advertising such weaponry in "Shotgun News" has any left. They have already been bought up. Expect that prices for such weapons already in the U.S. will probably triple at the very least.

The stock market did poorly all last week. Prognosis for next week is likely to be poor as well. Given that we are all pretty much sure that some sort of economic collapse will likely be one of the triggers for some type of government power grab, then this is something that should be watched closely.

So, stay alert, and don't do anything stupid. The good Lord gave you all brains, he expects you to make use of them.

CNN Stops Airing Ad Campaign

TV Spots Criticized
U.N. Global Warming Treaty

By Howard Kurtz
Washington Post Staff Writer
Friday, October 3, 1997; Page B02
The Washington Post

A blizzard of industry ads on global warming has been airing on CNN, assailing a proposed U.N. treaty that would clamp down on fuel emissions.

That is, until yesterday, when the network founded by Ted Turner abruptly halted the million-dollar campaign. Turner is a passionate environmentalist who has given speeches around the world on global warming.

Ben Goddard, the Los Angeles adman who created the spots, said a CNN sales executive told him yesterday he was acting on orders from Turner, the No. 2 official of parent company Time Warner, and Tom Johnson, chairman of the CNN News Group.

"He was just a messenger," said Goddard, whose agency, Goddard Claussen, created the "Harry and Louise" ads that helped defeat President Clinton's health care reform plan. "This was millions of dollars in business going out the door. I pointed out to him it didn't seem to make sense, if the ads were good enough to run up to now."

CNN spokesman Steve Haworth said that "it has been our policy for years not to run ads on controversial news stories that we are covering. . . . Our principles are worth more than the ad dollars." But Goddard noted that CNN aired $12 million worth of the industry-backed "Harry and Louise" during the health care debate, which the media covered far more intensively.

As recently as last month, Turner talked about global warming on "Larry King Live." "It's hotter than hell out there," he said. But Haworth dismissed suggestions that Turner singled out the ads, which began Sept. 10, because of his strong views, saying: "That thesis is belied by the fact that we took the ads."

Haworth said no ads would be accepted from any faction in the controversy.

The rejected commercials — which continue to air in some local television markets — were financed by the Global Climate Information Project, a coalition that includes the American Automobile Manufacturers Association, National Association of Manufacturers, National Cattlemen's Beef Association and United Mine Workers. Says one spot: "What do you know about the United Nations' proposed climate treaty? . . . It would force the U.S. to cut energy use by over 20 percent . . . Gasoline prices could go up by 50 cents a gallon."

A second ad shows a hand scissoring countries from a map, saying that "132 of 166 countries are exempt. Indefinitely. So while the United States is forced to make drastic cuts in energy use, countries like India, China and Mexico are not."

Haworth said CNN launched a legal review after the Environmental Information Center, a Washington advocacy group, questioned the ads' accuracy. But coalition spokesman Richard Pollock said they had been approved by CNN's standards and practices division.

"They're just trying to cover their tails," Pollock said. "The man at the top said, 'Pull 'em.'"

HOMOSEXUAL AGENDA

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Vice President Al Gore's endorsement of the "Ellen" coming-out episode won praise in Hollywood and got panned by critics who accused him of pandering to a constituency for a presidential run.

The mixed reaction was reminiscent of what followed Dan Quayle's condemnation of another TV character — Murphy Brown.

In a speech Thursday to the Hollywood Radio and Television Society, Gore singled out TV shows and characters for their contribution to society. Oscar the Grouch taught kids valuable lessons and Archie Bunker forced Americans to confront their racial and ethnic prejudices, he said.

"And, when the character Ellen came out, millions of American were forced to look at sexual orientation in a more open light," Gore said.

The executive director of the national Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation said the praise for Ellen was deserved.

"Al Gore is a real friend to the gay and lesbian community — and he's absolutely right," said Joan Garry in GLAAD's New York office. "'Ellen' is thoughtful, well-written and funny, which gives Americans an opportunity to understand that sexual orientation is part of the fabric."

The remarks also delighted veteran Hollywood publicist Howard Bragman, who is homosexual.

"I think it's a wonderful thing when the vice president says that," he said. "My God, haven't we come a long way."

The comment could help Gore should he run for president, as expected, Bragman added.

"It's a strategic message to the entertainment and gay community, setting the stage for the same successful gay fund-raising that Bill Clinton did," he said.

But Randy Tate, executive director of the Christian Coalition, said Gore was "way out of the mainstream" and that most Americans see homosexuality as morally wrong. He accused Gore of "craven pandering to Hollywood."

ABC, criticized over the show from groups including the Southern Baptists, welcomed Gore's support.

"'Ellen' took on a challenging subject and delivered an episode of television that stands among the finest," said Jamie Tarses, ABC Entertainment president. "It was both meaningful and entertaining, which is what TV is at its best."

The network, which has clashed with series star Ellen DeGeneres over using parental advisories on some episodes, dropped a planned warning for Wednesday night's episode titled "The Gay Yellow Pages."

Gore's comments recalled then-Vice President Quayle's denunciation in May 1992 of "Murphy Brown" for "mocking the importance of fatherhood" by giving birth out of wedlock. Quayle himself then drew criticism, although he was later credited with expanding the political debate on family values.

"The point of the show is to let kids know there's nothing wrong with being gay," Ellen DeGeneris.

Gore and President Clinton helped push TV networks into adopting a ratings system for programs, but they have been wary of antagonizing an industry that pours big money into Democratic campaigns.

In July 1996, Gore denounced shows such as the "Mighty Morphin Power Rangers" and told entertainment executives they need to produce better children's television.

In his weekly radio broadcast Saturday, Clinton did criticize pop culture, including movies and music videos, for glorifying drugs. Gore was more conciliatory Thursday.

"Few communities in this nation care as deeply about social and ethical issues," he said.

Predicting a "Golden Era" for Hollywood with increased global trade and new entertainment technologies, Gore said that opportunity comes with "deep responsibility that we all share."

He urged Hollywood executives to avoid the temptation to glamorize violence, tobacco and drugs on TV and film. "All I ask is show our young people a full and accurate picture of what these killers do to people's lives," he said.

ABC DROPS "PARENTAL ADVISORY" FROM ELLEN

ABC, a DISNEY subsidiary, has decided to remove the 'parental advisory' warning placed on its sitcom ELLEN. This action follows a poll taken by ABCnews.com that asked the question "Would you allow your child to watch a lesbian kiss on television?" Attached is a message from the Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation (GLAAD). GLAAD reports to have "exposed a recent attempt by a radical religious group to stuff the ballot box on ABCnews.com". In the same message they report that GLAAD "mobilized national support for removal of the advisory." Please be aware that we were notified of the ABC Poll through a pro-homosexual email list! These statements clearly show the hypocrisy of the Gay/Lesbian community. That ABC/DISNEY so readily removed the advisory is further evidence of their goal to normalize the homosexual lifestyle.

ABCnews.com quoted Ellen DeGeneres, the homosexual star of the show, as stating "This advisory is telling kids something's wrong with being gay." The point of the show is to let kids know there's nothing wrong with being gay," she said.

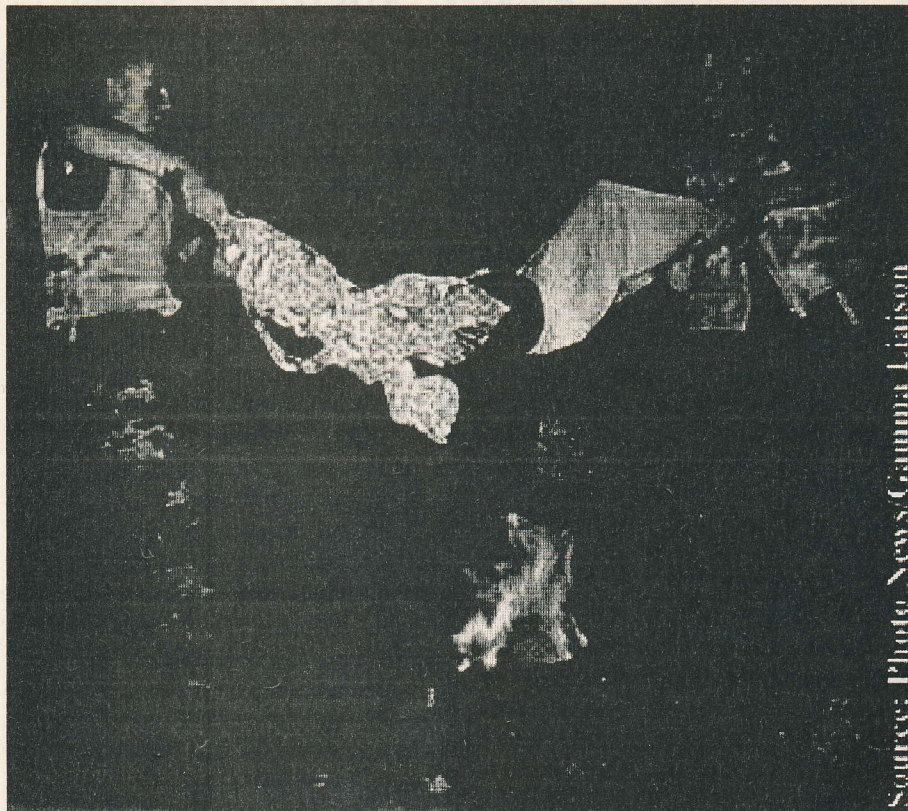

This should not be surprising. Scripture tells us explicitly that the homosexual community "not only [perform homosexual acts], but also give hearty approval to those who practice them." Romans 1:26-32 Please keep in mind that Michael Eisner, CEO of Disney, boasts that 60% of Disney employees are homosexual; 20 times the national average.

UN "peacekeepers" torture a Somali child over fire

by William Norman Grigg

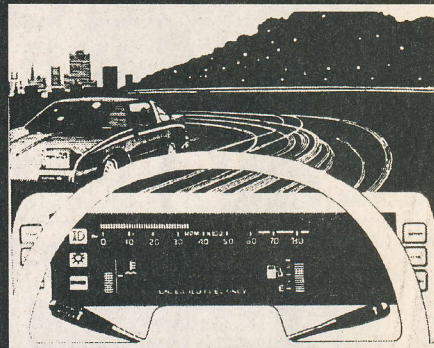

"We are not going to achieve a new world order without paying for it in blood as well as in words and money," warned Arthur Schlesinger Jr. in the July/August 1995 issue of Foreign Affairs. Schlesinger had taken to the pages of the flagship journal of the Council on Foreign Relations to vindicate the dubious proposition that the United Nations military represents the thin blue line dividing peaceful civilization from savagery — in short, our planetary police. But what happens when the planetary police run amok and become the agents of bloodshed? When local police abuse their power, the abused have avenues of redress. From what body can those abused by the planetary police seek justice? The escalating scandal of unpunished atrocities committed by UN "peacekeepers" illustrates that the planetary police are beyond accountability.

"Perhaps our leaders should put the question to the people: what do we want the United Nations to be?" Schlesinger wrote. "Do we want it to avert more killing fields around the planet? Or do we want it to dwindle into impotence, leaving the world to the anarchy of nation-states?" Critics of the UN should eagerly embrace such a debate — provided that a copy of the above photograph is made available to all participants. First published in the United States on the cover of the June 24th issue of the left-wing weekly Village Voice, the photograph depicts two Belgian paladins of the new world order giddily holding a Somali child over an open flame. Other series of photographs depict UN soldiers kicking and stabbing a Somali, and another soldier apparently urinating on the Somali's dead body; yet another shows a Somali child being forced to drink salt water, vomit, and worms. A second group of photos published in the July 15th Village Voice shows the dead bodies of bound Somalis — what appears to be the work of a death squad.

One atrocity not caught on camera involved the "punishment" of a Somali child by placing him in a metal container and withholding water from him for two days; predictably, the relentless African heat killed the child. One Belgian UN soldier testified that it was a regular practice to use metal boxes as prison cells, and that other Somalis probably died similarly gruesome deaths.

CRIMINAL SYNDICALISM

WHO OWNS RUSSIA?

By Martin Mann

As Russian citizens struggle to make ends meet, plutocrats are preparing to purchase the nation's natural wealth and an American-based financial consortium is moving to control Russian business and industry using shadowy intermediaries.

An international investment syndicate led by the Chase Manhattan Bank, the financial flagship of the worldwide Rockefeller empire, is preparing the ground to purchase Russia's best assets and vast natural resources at giveaway prices rigged by corrupt government officials. One economist has called the sale "the most profitable piece of plunder since World War II." In an effort to transform the former Soviet Union's rigidly controlled communist society into a market system, the Russian government is "privatizing" its formerly state-owned economy.

"Some of the world's largest oil and gas deposits, gold and diamond mines as well as giant industrial plants are up for grabs," said Paul Adler, an international economic consultant, upon returning from a business trip to Moscow. Through its network of elite back-channel contacts - such as the Bilderberg Group and the Council of Foreign Relations - the Rockefeller consortium has seized the lead in this epic post-Soviet sell-off, Adler added.

THE RICH GET RICHER

Behind the scenes, Rockefeller-led globalists are pulling the strings of every major player in this gigantic game, "from the IMF (the International Monetary Fund) to Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin," Adler said.

In theory, it was the ordinary Russians who were to become the owners of most formerly state-owned assets. Russia issued "privatization vouchers" to every citizen in 1992 in order to facilitate the turnover. These entitlements - the rough equivalent of warrants used in the U.S. stock market - came in several varieties. Convertible vouchers had a cash value. But workers in some industries were also issued ownership warrants which must be held in reserve until a release date is set by law.

In practice, the average Muscovite, hungry and desperate for cash, sold off his convertible privatization shares as soon as he received them. According to the latest data, some 94 percent of these vouchers which entitle the holder to bid on property at government auctions, are now in the hands of Russia's leading private banks.

The banks may have been Russian, but the money they used to buy up these privatization entitlements by the sackful, came from abroad, mostly in hidden conduits, according to Yegor Griskov, a former Soviet economic planner who is now a researcher at Columbia University.

"When they began bidding on former state holdings put up for sale by the government, most of the Moscow banks were just fronts for Chase Manhattan and other foreign speculators," Griskov said.

The Rockefeller consortium also made sure it rigged the bidding for some of Russia's most valuable assets, well-placed contacts at Russia's UN delegation told the SPOTLIGHT. Neither the financial details, nor the identity of the winning bidders for last year's state property auctions have been made public thus far in Russia.

But to document their charges of bribery, conspiracy and bid-rigging by the Chase Manhattan investment syndicate, Russian diplomatic sources have provided this populist newspaper with access to a confidential report detailing some of the sweetheart deals obtained by speculators. These speculators had to pad their public bids with private under-the-table payoffs, according to sources at the UN.

Gazprom, recognized as the world's largest gas monopoly when it was worth at least $3.4 billion, according to a 1993 World Bank study. But last June it was sold in Moscow to an anonymous bidder for $228 million - less than a tenth of its lowest projected market value. The lucky partners behind this bargain-buy are reportedly David Rockefeller and Chernomyrdin, who made the deal through a syndicate front.

In a similar vein, Lukoil, Russia's largest petroleum conglomerate, worth $3.4 billion at a minimum, was taken over by unidentified Western speculators for a mere $294 million. Russian diplomats say Chase Manhattan was the beneficiary of the fire sale. Unified Energy Systems, the former Soviet bloc's main power and utility generator, was said to be worth more than $3 billion. It was sold to international investors for $467 million. "And these shameless scams are just the beginning," Griskov said "The foreign speculators who are looting our economy profit again by fixing the Moscow currency exchanges in their favor." To spearhead its conquest of the former Soviet Union - from the satellite nations of Eastern Europe to the vast expanses and unexplored treasures of Asia - the Rockefeller dynasty is turning to a new generation of financial viceroys and economic colonizers, according to economist Paul Adler. These rising "rainmakers," as they're known on Wall Street, seldom acknowledge their links to the Chase Manhattan consortium.

"In today's turbulent global markets, the need is not for staunch standard-bearers, but discreet dealmakers," Adler said. Among the most prominent figures known - but never officially said - as front men for the Rockefeller interests, Adler cited the following: Edouard Stern, the billionaire financier and heir to the controlling interest in Lazard Freres, a major international investment bank, is said to have inherited the mantle of the late Andre Meyer, a legendary Rockefeller go-between and enforcer. Since 1993, Stern is believed to have turned his full attention to Russian and Asian investments.

Philippe Fabrikant, a roving investment adviser who reportedly holds US, French and Israeli citizenship, is believed to be in charge of maintaining Chase Manhattan's backchannel liaison with its Russian outposts.

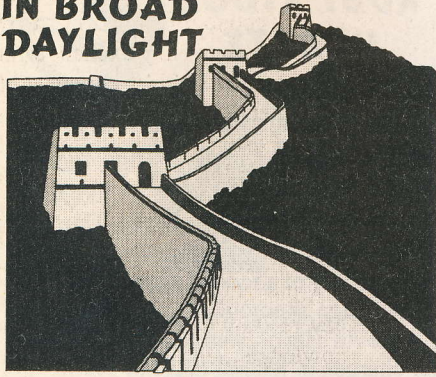

Vladimir Potanin, a youthful Russian financier who heads Moscow's giant Oneximbank, has been trained in the latest investment banking techniques at One Chase Manhattan Plaza in New York City, the command post of the Rockefellers' flagship.

Lavrenti Vyakhirev is the Russian executive who oversees the operations of Gazprom and Lukoil, the giant Russian gas and oil combines now reportedly owned by David Rockefeller and Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin in a partnership hidden behind an elaborate front.

"Unlike the arrogant profiteering of their robber baron forebearers, the Rockefellers' biggest deals are shrouded in secrecy nowadays. But this invisible empire is growing. Its secret strategy to dominate the immense post-Soviet economy is a real danger - a threat to all mankind," Adler added.

CAPTAINS OF INDUSTRY ROLL OUT THE RED CARPET WHILE CITY AND STATE OFFICIALS STAY AWAY

By John Pomfret,
Washington Post Staff Writer
Saturday, November 1, 1997; Page A07

NEW YORK, Oct. 31, 1997 Chinese President Jiang Zemin received a hero's welcome from captains of industry today and the diplomatic version of a Bronx cheer from New York's politicians in a visit that underscored clashing American perceptions of the world's last Communist giant.

The mayor of Mount Vernon, N.Y., Ernest Davis, was the highest-ranking public official to meet the Chinese president when he arrived here Thursday night, a day after he and President Clinton held the first U.S.-China summit in the United States in 12 years. New York's mayor, Rudolph W. Giuliani, and Gov. George E. Pataki declined to see Jiang because of their opposition to China's human rights record.

But today in New York, as on other stops of Jiang's week-long tour, business leaders, anxious to get a piece of China's record-breaking economy, scrambled for time with the Chinese leader. The U.S.-China Business Council's dinner tonight at the Waldorf-Astoria on Park Avenue was limited to members only, in part because of fierce competition for seats. No fewer than 30 presidents, chairmen or CEOs of top American firms attended the state dinner for Jiang at the White House on Wednesday night.

In New York and New Jersey, Jiang met with executives from IBM, AT&T, Lucent Technologies, Ford Motor Co. and other firms. IBM's chief executive officer, Louis V. Gerstner Jr., embraced the leader outside IBM's tower on Madison Avenue and, in heavily accented Chinese, said, "Old friend, how are you?"

Gerstner went on to express his satisfaction that the United States' relationship with China was "not so narrow that it focuses on a single issue," a reference generally used to describe human rights.

Jiang was shown advanced computer technology in a tour narrated in Chinese by C.J. Tan, an IBM scientist and one of the developers of the Big Blue computer that beat Russian chess master Garry Kasparov earlier this year. Tan's father was an officer in Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist Army during China's civil war and flew with the U.S.-trained Flying Tigers. His family fled China for Taiwan when the communists took over and he has been in the United States since 1958.

The enthusiastic welcome by the business community reflects divisions in the United States about how to deal with the Asian colossus. Business leaders and policymakers, who have the upper hand in the American debate, argue that engaging China is the only way to help it reform its fast-growing economy, its fledgling legal system and ensure that China cooperates with the United States in hot spots around the world. It is also good for American business, they say.

Indeed, the centerpiece of the summit demonstrated how two U.S. priorities — business and security — can be combined in China policy. A deal announced Wednesday will allow U.S. companies to export nuclear-power technology, potentially worth billions, in exchange for assurances from China that it will halt its exports of nuclear-weapons technology to Pakistan and stop selling missiles to Iran.

China also signed a $3 billion deal for 50 planes from Boeing, which made 279 of the 354 jets now in China. China buys one-tenth of its production.

Critics of China, ranging from political moderates and liberals to conservative Christians, are supporting a package of 11 bills scheduled to be considered in the House of Representatives Wednesday that would fundamentally alter U.S.-China ties. Among them are bills that would deny commercial status to firms owned by China's army that operate in the United States and increase the number of U.S. diplomats monitoring human rights in Beijing. While none of the bills has much chance of becoming law, congressional sources said, they do illustrate the yawning gap in American perceptions.

Acting on one China bill that has passed, Secretary of State Madeleine K. Albright today named a top assistant, Gregory Craig, as a special coordinator to oversee American policy toward Tibet. Craig, 52, a former aide to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) has been head of the State Department's policy planning office.

During his two-day stay in Washington, Jiang was bombarded with tough questions about China's treatment of Tibetans and religious freedom, and China has criticized the naming of a special coordinator as interference in its internal affairs. The timing of Craig's appointment suggested that Albright wanted to wait until Jiang had left Washington before announcing the decision.

After breakfasting in New York with former president George Bush, an old China hand, Jiang headed downtown to open the New York Stock Exchange and meet with executives of the investment firms Goldman Sachs and Salomon Brothers.

"Good morning! I wish you good trading!" said the bullish 71-year-old president after he rang the market's opening bell and flashed a thumbs-up to non-plussed brokers.

Seventeen mainland Chinese companies are listed on the New York Stock Exchange, and Richard A. Grasso, the stock exchange's chairman, who escorted Jiang, said he expected the number to rise.

Grasso presented Jiang with a sculpture of a bull and a bear, symbols for strong and weak markets. Jiang presented Grasso with a green flying horse and said in English, "I hope that your market will be as vibrant as a flying horse."

NATIONAL ID CARDS

Electronic ID cards to go on trial

by Nicholas Rufford
From the London Sunday Times

THE government is to take the first step towards a national identity card. Next month ministers will announce the launch of a computerized card that will give people faster service from the Inland Revenue, Vat inspectors and the social security department.

The scheme, to be launched in partnership with Microsoft and EDS, the American computer giants, has been in preparation since January. It has been kept under wraps so far because of its political sensitivity. Civil rights groups yesterday criticized the government for introducing an identity card "by the back door".

Peter Kilfoyle, public services minister, said the card would cut bureaucracy and, once established, would improve access to government services. "These cards can be used in a whole variety of ways," he said. "They can be used for a driving license, for benefits, to register to vote. There are huge numbers of applications."

Trials will start next month, with plans for the cards to be in widespread use next year.

Labor consistently opposed Tory plans for a national identity card before the election. The new "electronic signature cards" will not carry photographs of the holder but will contain a code embedded in a microchip. "The system is similar to using a bank cash-point machine, but many times more secure," said Richard Tyson-Davies, an industry expert.

A senior Cabinet Office official said the card could also carry "biometric" data, such as a finger or thumb print, which could take the place of a PIN number, as well as data on blood type or DNA. "The cards will hold information unique to each individual, a kind of mini-personal profile," he said.

Ann Widdecombe, the former Home Office minister, said: "The government should be open and say we want identity cards. Joe Public would support it."

The cards will complement a government drive to computerize its services, so that applications for everything from vehicle licenses to welfare payments can be made from personal computers or from terminals in high-street shops and banks. It envisages that by next year people will be using the cards to "sign" computerized tax, Vat and employment forms.

Kilfoyle, who visits Singapore later this month to examine similar systems, said there were no plans to make the cards mandatory. He predicted Britain would follow France, where the majority of people carry cards for convenience in voting and in social security and financial transactions.

Of the 15 countries in the European Union, 12 have some form of identity card. Opinion polls have shown that about two-thirds of people support the introduction of a compulsory identity card in Britain.

The new card has been developed by the Central Information Technology Unit, a little-known arm of government. Microsoft and EDS have provided backing in the hope of future software contracts.

The first electronic signature cards will be issued later this year by the main high-street banks and will give customers access to government services as well as enabling them to use personal computers to move money around.

Ministers plan to launch a separate electronic signature card without the co-operation of the banks. "In the way that you can get a bank statement any time of the day or night, there is no reason why you can't get government services 24 hours a day," said Kilfoyle.

Justice, the civil rights group, said the electronic signature cards were really identity cards brought in by stealth. "If people are pressured into carrying cards because life is made difficult without them, then we are seeing a type of national registration scheme which most people would find objectionable."

RUBY RIDGE UPDATE

Judge dismisses state murder charge against Ruby Ridge figure

BONNERS FERRY, Idaho: A judge dismissed a state murder charge Thursday against Kevin Harris, who was recharged in the killing of a federal agent in the 1992 Ruby Ridge shootout.

Kevin Harris was acquitted of murder charges in federal court in 1993.

In August, Boundary County prosecutors charged him with murder in state court. They also charged the FBI marksmen who fired the shot that killed Vicki Weaver, wife of white separatist Randy Weaver, with involuntary manslaughter.

Magistrate Quentin Harden ruled Thursday that the Idaho charges against Harris violate a state law barring prosecution of someone who faced the same charges in another "state, territory or country."

"To rule that the courts of the United States of America do not come under 'another state, territory, or country' would be an anomalous result giving more credence to the courts of another country than to the courts of our own nation," Harden wrote.

The prosecutor Denise Woodbury, who charged both Harris and FBI marksmen Lon Horiuchi in August, had argued that the state double jeopardy law was meant to cover prosecutions in foreign countries, not the United States. She declined to comment on Harden's ruling Thursday.

Harris, 39, of Republic, Wash., was accused in the shooting death of deputy U.S. Marshal William Degan and of shooting at another agent in the Aug. 21, 1992, shootout that sparked the 11-day siege at Weaver's cabin.

A friend of Weaver's, Harris was staying at the cabin during the shootout and was wounded by an FBI sniper's bullet.

Weaver's 14-year-old son, Sam, was killed in the gunfight. Vicki Weaver was later shot and killed during the siege by an errant FBI sniper's bullet.

Harden's ruling does not affect the involuntary manslaughter charge against Horiuchi, who has never been tried in any court. His lawyers have indicated they will try to move that case to a federal court.

Harris received the news that the murder charge against him had been dismissed at his job as a welder, said Diane Peters, his business partner at Eagle Industries.

"We were hoping what was fair and just would turn out," Peters said. END

POLITICAL PRISONERS IN THE U.S.A.

The George Hansen Story

Copyright c 1997, The WINDS.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.
<http://www.TheWinds.org>

The idea of political prisoners and the abuse they suffer at the hands of their government is not a new one to the majority of the American public. When the concept is presented, it usually brings forth visions of the old Soviet gulags or the horrors of Southeast Asia. The possibility that America would have such a thing as a "political prisoner" within its own borders would be, to the majority of this nation's citizens, considered the substance of right wing, militia or separatist paranoia.

A former twelve-term Republican congressman from Idaho, however, has different ideas as to where one could find this scenario being played out. Former GOP Congressman, George Hansen, has been referred to on as many as 2,500 talk-radio stations across the country as "America's most famous political prisoner", according to the "U.S. Citizens Human Rights Commission."

"The odyssey of George Hansen in the nation's legal system," claims the Mission Statement of that organization, "is so brutal that it makes him the natural spokesman to the nation and the world of the terror experienced by thousands of Americans each year as they are ground under the heel of a ruthless justice system run amok."

The group, as its name implies, was established to provide recourse to remedy against suspected or actual human rights violations. Their Mission Statement, however, denotes a different approach to the subject than most are familiar with. Instead of the standard application to human rights, i.e., addressing immigrants', minorities' or children's rights, etc., their declared purpose is for "publicly exposing and eliminating the wave of violence and killings of Americans everywhere at the hands of government law enforcement officers and officials of the judiciary."

Such claims would seem questionable, at best, were it not for the fact that this fourteen-year veteran of Congress and former Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Department of Agriculture under Nixon has himself been the focus of "political retribution."

The newspaper, The Idaho Observer, stated that "Seven-term U.S. Congressman, George Hansen (R. Idaho) was punished severely for having the audacity to implement a plan which would make Congress instantly accountable to the American public."

"Hansen, author of 'To Harass Our People', an indictment of the IRS, was also the architect of the Congressional Accountability Project (CAP) which was...to use national TV and a 1-900 number to instantly post congressional floor votes and public response to them."

This legislation met with a hostile congressional response and began a series of events in the life of the congressman that makes the term "bizarre" seem woefully inadequate.

The real substance of Rep. Hansen's nightmare began when James Cole, special counsel to the House Ethics Committee (the same special prosecutor assigned to deal with Newt Gingrich's ethics case), went after Hansen on alleged violation of Title 18 sec. 1001 of the United States Code. He was accused of lying to the government by omitting specific information on his financial disclosure statement. Even after the Supreme Court handed down its decision, years later, vacating Hansen's conviction and calling the litigation a "wrongful prosecution", Cole was still presenting his handling of the Hansen case as his preeminent qualification in order to be assigned the Gingrich matter. After successfully receiving the case, a story published by Associated Press included a photograph of Cole with the caption, "AP-POINTED". Special counsel James M. Cole made a name by prosecuting a congressman who falsified his disclosure forms,"—the AP still apparently ignorant that Hansen was declared innocent of the charge by the highest court in the land.

THE CHRONOLOGY OF EVENTS

In an extensive interview with The WINDS, Rep. Hansen detailed the chronology of events, up to and including his torture and incarceration by federal marshals. The following is that chronology.

Congressman Hansen's trouble really began, he told this reporter, about 1964.

"I'd been in a running battle with the Feds for years because I don't like what they do to people—so they tried to take me down. The big part started in 1975.

"The IRS came after me with their criminal division." Other congressmen, Hansen alleges, "had the IRS foil their reelection bids claiming they evaded taxes, thus labeling them as 'scoff-laws', a term used to imply that the legislators thought that they were above the law, 'something the American people don't like'. "In my case," Hansen says, "my people [his electorate] knew better. They [the IRS] were after me with criminal [proceedings] for three years and they finally had to give me back $10,000 in overpaid taxes. Then they got their 'big brother', the Department of Justice, to come after me on campaign contributions. When that didn't work, they [pursued] ethics violations like they did with Newt Gingrich which also didn't work. Then they claimed I didn't report my wife for [income] tax purposes."

The method the government used that finally resulted in a "successful" prosecution, the congressman told The WINDS, was when they took him to downtown Washington, D.C. "where," Hansen says, "you could indict a ham sandwich," and was indeed indicted for "failure to report" under the previously stated U.S. Code. "As a result of this I ended up in and out of jail for a ten-year period—four years solid time behind prison bars. Finally the Supreme Court handed down a decision in May of 1995 claiming that the case was a "wrongful prosecution"—translation: it should never have been brought to court.

During his incarceration Rep. Hansen was subjected to what federal inmates refer to as "Diesel Therapy," so named because of the continuous transport by diesel-powered vehicles. This takes place in transit to or from whatever detention facility to which the prisoner is ultimately assigned. The congressman detailed this form of "institutionalized torture" for The WINDS. The reader should be advised that the incidents described therein depict graphic details that some may find extremely disturbing. Also in the following account it is well to remember that this treatment was being perpetrated upon a 63 year-old man.

"When they chain you up, legs and wrists, they put a thing called a stiffener on those they don't like. That's a small black box slightly larger than a pack of cigarettes. This is placed on the chains between the handcuffs and makes them rigid so your arms can't move. Then they run a chain from your arms and fasten it to your waist. When they do that it pulls your arms from a normal 180-degree angle to 90 degrees, putting your arms in a bind which cuts into the nerves of your wrists so badly that, the result is, after an extended period of time like that, it requires weeks and sometimes months to get feeling and circulation back to your hands—and pretty much the same for your feet.”

After placing these manacles on hands and feet, “they strap you into a seat and you’re so bound up with chains that if you have to go to the bathroom, you can’t do anything about it. You can’t pull your pants down or do anything to relieve yourself.”

According to Hansen, the vehicles he was transported in reeked of urine and feces because the prisoners were chained in that position for twenty hours a day, forcing them to accommodate their bodily functions without access to sanitation facilities.

“The best thing you could do,” Hansen advised others, “is the Biblical act of fasting. If you don’t eat and don’t drink, you don’t have to go to the bathroom. They do this to you for four or five weeks at a time; they put you in chains about two in the morning, you get out about ten at night. And when you’re bigger than average [Rep. Hansen is 6’6”], you’re wedged in, sitting there twenty hours a day and you can’t move your legs. Because the shackles cut off the return blood flow from your lower extremities, soon your legs fill with blood, especially when you’re 63 years-old as I was then. Then you get to walk around with two barrels full of blood where your calves and lower legs should be.

“The result of this is that your feet swell and become two to three sizes too large for your shoes. [Hansen claims that the marshals intentionally provided him with shoes several sizes too small]. This causes your toes to jam into the ends of your shoes and blood blisters form underneath your toenails. They then start growing straight up and to the side in the most grotesque manner. You can’t believe what happens under those conditions. Your toes turn to knobs, becoming very disfigured, making it impossible to wear shoes. The only way I could get shoes on was to pull my toenails out by the roots, myself, with pliers. I now have ten toes without nails.

“Because of the blood pooling in my shins for such extended periods of time, if I just skinned them, on the back of a seat or something, it formed open sores that didn’t heal for as long as a year and a half. I couldn’t get any medical attention because of their attitude toward me. They were trying to send me a message.

“I found a foil container in the garbage with a couple of, what used to be, iodine swabs all dried out. I put some water on it to try to activate what was left of the iodine and applied that to the sores. It did cause some coagulating and eventually, after some time, healed over.

“My legs looked like they were beaten with two-by-fours. When I went to Iran several years before, I was the only public official to get into the country during the hostage crisis, and that’s what they showed me the Shah had been doing to his people. If they didn’t like what you were doing, they would smash your shins with boards and pull your nails out and break your teeth. I went to Congress recently and detailed what happened in Iran and told them I didn’t even have to leave the country—I got the job done down the road about a hundred miles—right here in the United States of America. It shook them up pretty badly.

“The way they smashed my teeth out is they isolated me, arbitrarily, to a place where I had no communication with the outside world. They placed me where I had to do chemical testing on extremely hazardous substances with absolutely no protection. That caused my bones and teeth to go soft. I ended up with twenty-four teeth breaking off at the gum line. For three years I was not allowed to see a dentist. So far, it has cost me about $14,000 to try to repair my mouth. My dentist says I’m a dental cripple for life because the chemicals eroded not only my teeth, but my jawbone and gums. I went through about the same thing they do in a foreign prison. I got it done a little differently, but the results were the same.”

The actual “diesel therapy,” Hansen says, is for the purpose of isolating a prisoner from the rest of the world for extended periods of time by keeping him in transit. This is a form of physical and emotional torture somewhat akin to sleep deprivation and brainwashing, but with much more serious physiological consequences.

“I saw the U.S.A. in a different way,” he continued, “I surrendered to custody in Pocatello, went to Blackfoot [Idaho], down to Salt Lake City, Davis County jail, was put on an airplane, went to Seattle, down to Sacramento, to Phoenix, over to Lompoc, down to Los Angeles, back to Phoenix then to Lompoc again then to Los Angeles and San Diego—all at taxpayer expense—then up to Denver and down to Oklahoma City to El Reno [detention facility] then to Atlanta, then hopped on the coast by bus to several jails and prisons till I reached Petersburg Federal Correctional Institution in Virginia where I stayed. That was one “diesel therapy” trip,” which, Hansen said, took over a month.

When later released, the process was done in reverse, the congressman told this office, to transport him to a parole hearing in Boise.

Upon presentation of the requirements and restrictions of his parole, Rep. Hansen informed the parole board he would not accept the terms of financial reporting because it would reveal the names of people he was representing who were experiencing difficulties with the government. This would result in the betrayal of those people, Hansen claimed, and he told them if they didn’t like it, “I’ll just stay here and serve more time.” The parole board acceded to his demands in writing then, according to Hansen, “ten days later they told me, ‘we can’t do that.’ I said, ‘You already did’. I was already released. I told them that if they didn’t like it, to put me back in prison. They said they couldn’t unless I violated the terms of my parole. ‘I’ll tell you what,’ he informed the parole board, ‘I will live up the terms I signed out on and you do what you want to do.’ When asked what they would do if he violated their version of his parole—whether they would notify him so he could present himself and surrender, or if they would send the marshals after him with guns and chains, they told him they would notify him to surrender. “That was a lie,” Hansen said.

HANSEN GETS ARRESTED FOR GOING TO CHURCH

I went to my own church on a Sunday morning and sat right beside a federal marshal who was also a member of the congregation. That became my parole violation—going to my own church in my own home town—because they didn’t approve my travel, even though they signed an agreement that said they wouldn’t restrict my travel. They just make up the rules as they go along,” he said.

While addressing a church congregation in Omaha, Nebraska, Hansen claims black cars began prowling the parking lot, helicopters appeared overhead, “the next thing I knew,” he said, “I was in chains and they had changed my name to Fredrick Smith, heisted me off in the dead of night in a Lear jet, all at the expense of the taxpayer. They took me to an abandoned jail where I spent Good Friday and Easter Sunday. My wife couldn't find me, Congress couldn't find me, my attorney couldn't find me and the media couldn't find me. I was just a lost soul for several days while they had me strapped to a wall in an old jail."

"That's our government," the congressman added with a note of sadness.

The purpose of the aforementioned treatment, he claims, was to send him a message not to mess with their system. "They take you out on the road where you have no communication with anybody. You can't write, you can't call, you can't be called—you're lost" where no legal process can intervene. "They get away with it because it is also a form of transferring prisoners."

It could be effectively argued that "diesel therapy" is an ingenious method of blowing a very large hole in Article 1, Section 9 of the Constitution which says, "The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it." When a legal system does what Rep. Hansen claims was done to him, it has effectively abolished the "privilege of the writ of habeas corpus" which historically extends through the U.S. Constitution back in time to the Magna Carta, A.D. 1215.

"When they kill people out there, and they do," Hansen continued, "and there are instances I'm thoroughly familiar with where they've killed people while they've been in transit—what they will do then is to take everyone who has witnessed the killing and scatter them throughout the huge jail system they run around the country so they can't communicate with one another. They then give themselves enough time for a court hearing to substantiate that the death was accidental."

After the Supreme Court declared Congressman Hansen innocent of any wrongdoing and that his case should never have been prosecuted, it still took the former legislator eight months to be released. When he applied to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco for the vacating of his sentence, and his release was imminent, the Justice Department, Hansen asserts, in one more bid to harass the former Congressman claimed, "'we think there are some technicalities you haven't looked at', and kept it going from May to Christmas. Then, the lower court judge decided, rather than to release me to travel on my own across the country to be present at a release hearing, which was nothing more than a proforma matter [administrative technicality], he had to jerk me around, put me back on "diesel therapy" and go back through the whole system again."

That lower court judge that Rep. Hansen claims made this final jab at him was Edward Lodge, the same judge against whom petitions for malfeasance of office are being presented to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals for, among other things, his alleged judicial mishandling of the Randy Weaver/Ruby Ridge affair.

This "odyssey" of former U.S. Representative George Hansen is apparently not an isolated instance of abuse by federal authorities of those to whom they desire to "send a message." Recently, such a case has come to light concerning Whitewater defendant, Susan McDougal.

SUSAN MCDUGAL GETS THE TREATMENT

Whether or not one agrees with McDougal's refusal to testify before the Whitewater investigators or whether Special Prosecutor, Kenneth Starr was justified in pressing contempt of court charges on her, McDougal's situation can certainly be scrutinized and cited as a likely example of, as Rep. Hansen puts it, "a legal system run amok."

A lawsuit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union (McDougal v. Ramon) charges that: Since December 1996, [McDougal] has been held in isolation, under lock-down up to 23 hours per day, while other inmates, even those charged with serious violent crimes, are allowed 12 hours a day outside their cells; [she is] consistently kept in handcuffs when other inmates have not been; variously denied visitation, medical visits, worship services, reading materials, and even a Bible; forced to wear a red jail uniform reserved for despised informants and baby killers; forced to endure the spectacle of male prisoners taunting her, exposing themselves and masturbating in front of her without intervention from guards.

"The abusive treatment of Ms. McDougal by Mr. Starr's office," said Mark Rosenbaum, Legal Director of the ACLU Foundation of Southern California, "must be the subject of a congressional investigation to ensure that, in the future, no federal prosecutor be permitted to wield authority in so brutish and inhuman a manner."

In July of this year, "the ACLU filed a federal lawsuit charging that the United States Government was holding McDougal illegally in the L.A. jail to punish her for refusing to testify to investigators in the Whitewater affair. U.S. Marshall Michael Ramon was named in the lawsuit because he had technical custody over McDougal."

Quoting from an ACLU press release, "McDougal's continued confinement in the L.A. County jail, despite the state court order releasing her, was designed to break her spirit and force her to testify before the Whitewater Special Prosecutor."

Could it not be logically reasoned that all that kept Susan McDougal from receiving the "diesel therapy" to which Hansen was subjected was that she was a much higher profile figure, being more closely scrutinized by the public? This certainly would make the degree of abuse Congressman Hansen experienced impractical in McDougal's case, from the point of view of the federal marshals.

When Rep. Hansen was asked if he had any future plans to regain his congressional seat, the veteran legislator, who not once displayed a note of bitterness over his ordeal, simply replied, "My wife says if I ever run for anything again it had better be the border."

If one looks objectively at these instances, would it not seem to stretch the fabric of statistical probabilities to the breaking point to suggest that these occurrences are the only ones, and that they just, by chance, came to public attention? Perhaps no more unlikely than one viewing an iceberg and concluding that it stops at the waterline, merely because the remainder of it is lost to view.

The description of Congressman Hansen's ordeal and that of Susan McDougal as they were "ground under the heel of a ruthless justice system run amok", most clearly depicts the methods of those charting the course of the New World Order. They will brook no departure from their purposes nor obstruction to them. They are startlingly reminiscent of the biblical description from the pen of the prophet Daniel when he described such a "ruthless" power:

After this I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth: it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it. Daniel 7:7 END is an impeccably researched book based upon truth and law. It is a poignant expose of the Internal Revenue Service' most closely guarded secrets.

DON'T FILE YOUR TAXES UNTIL YOU READ THIS BOOK!

VULTURES IN EAGLE'S CLOTHING

This one book proves that, according to rulings of the Supreme Court, that have never been overturned, "If you are a American Citizen, living and working within one of the 50 American states, freely exercising your fundamental constitutional Right to Labor in a common occupation, the graduated income tax is NOT applicable to you!"

That is why there is NO LAW within the entire Internal Revenue Code making a citizen living and working in one of the 50 states "subject to", "liable for", or "required to" pay the graduated income tax. The tax must be and is voluntary.

Voluntary means 1) given freely without compulsion, 2) having the power of free choice — Webster's Dictionary.

VULTURES IN EAGLE'S CLOTHING contains the inspiring stories of intelligent and enlightened citizens who followed the proper legal procedure for volunteering out of the tax system. These are Americans who have stood up to the IRS and WON! They stopped the IRS's misapplication of the law in its tracks! These citizens have received letters from the IRS saying: "You are no longer required to file a 1040 form."

The IRS is powerless against these individuals! "Former I.R.S. Commissioner Roscoe Egger resigned in April of 1986 after publicly admitting that 35 million Americans no longer file personal income taxes!" Financial Survival, Issue 1, 1990.

Learn the truth and the truth shall set you free!

"OUR TAX SYSTEM IS BASED UPON VOLUNTARY ASSESSMENT AND PAYMENT AND NOT UPON DISTRRAINT" Flora v. U.S., 362 U.S. 145

VULTURES IN EAGLE'S CLOTHING teaches the legal procedures other Americans have used to unvolunteer and:

- Permanently STOP paying Income Taxes!
- Permanently STOP employers from withholding payroll taxes!
- Lawfully get 100% of their taxes paid refunded for the past three years!
- Lawfully exercise the right to NOT produce books and records for the IRS!
